DELEGATION FROM ARGENTINA WITHDRAWN FROM LEAGUE ASSEMBLY

Pueyrredon Says It Is Useless to Remain Following Decision to Delay Consideration of Amendments Which He Offered and Which He Calls Vital.

PROPOSAL TO STRIKE OUT ARTICLE 10

G. N. Barnes Speaks on Failure of Council to Prevent Russo-Polish War; Paderewski, Replying, Denies Imperialism.

By the Associated Press. GENEVA, Dec. 4.—Honorable Pueyrredon, head of Argentina's delegation to the League of Nations assembly, today sent a note to Paul Hymans, president of the assembly, officially withdrawing the Argentine delegation from the assembly.

The note, which was sent at 3:45 o'clock this afternoon, pointed out that the Argentine delegation regards its presence in the assembly as useless, following the refusal of the assembly to permit discussion of amendment of the league covenant.

Senator Pueyrredon told the Associated Press his action does not mean that Argentina has withdrawn from the League of Nations, but refused to say if the move was the preliminary to a final break.

Argentine's Attitude. "We feel," said Senator Pueyrredon, "that there is nothing more to be accomplished in the assembly. It has refused to permit even discussion of the amendments which Argentina considers as fundamental to the league—necessary to its successful existence."

Senator Pueyrredon said Argentina would not return her place in the assembly until it had passed the four amendments he had proposed. These aim principally at securing compulsory arbitration by the international court of justice, the admission of all the states and the election of all members of the council instead of only four as now.

Senator Pueyrredon's note, which was written in a respectful, but firm tone, declared Argentina's delegates came to Geneva for the purpose of contributing to the work of the assembly, which Argentina had believed would consecrate the principles of right and the liberty of nations. Argentina's hopes were in vain, the note asserted, and consequently she had ceased to participate in the assembly.

The decision of the delegates, it is pointed out, could hardly constitute the cancellation of Argentina's admission to the League of Nations, as the covenant provides that such cancellation can be made only after two years' notice has been given.

The Argentine delegate explained that he had expected to leave for home next Monday, but now had decided to remain to see what action the assembly might take at Monday's session. He declared he was supported by many of the South American states.

Argentina's withdrawal from the assembly constituted the first breach. The Argentine delegate worked most of last night framing his note, the decision to send which was taken after the receipt of reports from Argentina of deep resentment there over the rejection by the assembly of Senator Pueyrredon's suggested discussion of covenant amendments.

Hymans Confers With Him. President Hymans of the assembly called on Senator Pueyrredon this afternoon and the two were in conference for some time, but the Argentine delegate refused to be interviewed by the talk. The position he took came as a great surprise to the entire assembly.

Had Denied He Would Withdraw. The fact that Senator Pueyrredon did not attend today's meeting caused surprise and excitement among the assembly, especially among South Americans. His refusal to deny reports that Argentina would withdraw from the league, after he had characterized them last night as false, was believed to be due to a communication he had received from the Argentine Government this morning.

An amendment to the covenant of the League of Nations eliminating article 10 was introduced in the Assembly of the league today by Charles J. Doherty, Canadian Minister of Justice. The amendment probably will be referred to the Committee on Amendments.

WITHERS NOT TO SEEK RE-APPOINTMENT AS HEAD OF SCHOOLS

Henry J. Gerling and Miss Lillie R. Ernst Mentioned to Succeed Him.

Dr. John W. Withers, Superintendent of Instruction, today confirmed the report that he had informed the president of the Board of Education and the chairman of the Committee on Instruction, that he will not be a candidate for re-appointment when his term expires, Feb. 21. He returned home today from Ben Lomond, W. Va., where he attended the funeral of his father.

Asked if he would accept re-appointment in the event it is offered by the Board of Education, regardless of his determination not to seek the office, Dr. Withers refused to answer.

"I will give out a written statement next Monday or Tuesday giving my reasons for declining to be an applicant for re-appointment and setting forth my plans," he said, "but until that time I shall have nothing to say. It is true that I informed the president of the board and the chairman of the Committee on Instruction that I will not be a candidate for re-appointment and that is all I care to say at this time."

Dr. Withers' statement is of particular interest because of the campaign being made by five members of the board to prevent his re-appointment, and their efforts to obtain support of one other member. Six could accomplish his defeat were he to be a candidate. For Superintendent to succeed, Dr. Withers must have the support of five members of the board and Miss Lillie R. Ernst, assistant superintendent. Gerling is said to be the first choice of the anti-Withers group.

5 DAIRMEN FINED FOR SALE OF DEFICIENT MILK AND CREAM

Penalties Imposed in Police Court Range From $25 to $50 on Each Count.

Five dairymen were fined in Police Court today for marketing deficient milk. George H. Bergmans, 4600 North Newstead avenue, and Frank Seimtemp, 5443 Marcus avenue, were fined $25 each because their cream was deficient in butter fat. Anton Schulte, 4558 Carter avenue, was fined $50 on two counts for the same cause. Fred Meyers, 4323 North Taylor avenue, was fined $25 for milk deficient in nonfat solids. Louis Droste, 4958 Natural Bridge road, was fined $25 for milk deficient in butter fat.

MAN SAID TO HAVE KILLED WIFE AND SELF IN HIS SLEEP

Woman Who Finds Bodies Says Man Had Been Sleepwalker, and Told Fear of Tragedy.

By the Associated Press. CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—John Slepicka, a tailor, stabbed his wife to death and then killed himself while asleep early today, according to Mrs. Marie Wagner, mother of Mrs. Slepicka, who found the bodies. Slepicka, she said, had been a sleepwalker for several months, and had frequently expressed fear that his habit might lead to tragedy.

3432 AUTO LICENSES IN MONTH

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 4.—Licenses were issued to 3432 owners of automobiles by the Secretary of State in November, according to the report of James J. O'Connor, a supervisor of the automobile department. This brings the total for 1920 to 295,517 or an increase of $3,094 over 1919.

HARDING APPEALS FOR ABOLITION OF ALL SECTIONALISM

President-elect, in Address at Newport News, Says Unsettled Conditions Are Due to World Tumult.

LINKS RECORDS OF OHIO AND VIRGINIA

Hopes for Some Sort of International Peace Agreement—Stops Parade to Buy Winter Shoes.

By the Associated Press. NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Dec. 4.—Returning to American shores today from his vacation voyage, President-elect Harding received a rousing welcome from the Virginia tidewater cities, and responded with a message of renewed national confidence and ally.

Speaking at the Academy of Music, Senator Harding voiced hope for an international peace agreement and for steps toward disarmament, but asserted that there must be no sacrifice of nationalism. He also declared the United States must have "a navy equal to the aspirations of this country," so long as the States of America remain, and he made a particular plea for a greater merchant marine.

Links Virginia and Ohio. His appeal for abolition of sectionalism followed a tribute to Virginia whose name he linked with that of Ohio in reference to the number of Presidents who have come from the two States.

"There are difficult times ahead," he continued. "They are not the heritage of the administration that is soon to pass, so much as they are the result of the world situation. I have confidence enough as a Republican to believe that those of other political faiths are willing to do their utmost for the nation. We must each and all resolve to do our most and our best to put the United States of America on the forward track once more."

The steamer Pastores on which the President-elect and Mrs. Harding made the return voyage from the canal zone, came into Hampton Roads about 10:30 a. m. Disembarking immediately, the party was taken for a ride through the Newport News shipyards and the city's business section.

Crosses Roads on Destroyer. Crossing to Norfolk on a destroyer early in the afternoon Senator Harding was to spend the remainder of the day there as the guest of that city.

As she steamed up the roads, the Pastores was accorded a triumphal ovation. A flotilla of 25 army airplanes from Langley Field accompanied by three naval dirigibles went out to form a guard of honor, and the ships along the path of the President-elect were dressed in marine signal flags spelling out a welcome home.

The presidential yacht Mayflower, which brought Secretary Colby to the roads on the first leg of his journey to South America, dipped her flag as the Pastores passed, and the fleet of 25 army airplanes, which were flying near by, took the Secretary aboard, manned her rail to honor the President-elect. Big and little harbor craft joined in a thundering chorus of sirens and fog horns.

Tanned by exposure to the tropical sun and the salt air, President-elect Harding came down the gang plank a picture of perfect health and Mrs. Harding, who had been ill much of the time since they left New Orleans, Nov. 18, also appeared in excellent health. They greeted smilingly the crowd that waited for them at the pier and during their ride through the city they were kept busy waving acknowledgments to cheering crowds.

In Washington Monday he will attend the opening session of the Senate, clear up the work at his office there and, perhaps, make a short speech from the floor of the Senate.

COLBY SAILS FOR SOUTH AMERICA

Will Repay Visits of Presidents of Uruguay and Brazil.

By the Associated Press. NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Dec. 4.—Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State, sailed from Hampton Roads on the Battleship Florida today to return the visits to the United States of Presidents Brum of Uruguay and Pereira of Brazil, and to be the guest of the Argentine Government.

The presidential yacht Mayflower on which the official party left Washington late yesterday, arrived in Hampton Roads early today, and Colby spent the forenoon inspecting the Normal Institute before boarding the Florida. Colby made a brief address at the Normal Institute, a negro and Indian school.

TWO MEN CONFESS TO 10 HOLDUPS AND 3 BURGLARIES

Joseph W. Fess and John T. Shaw, Captured After Turning Out Street Lamp, Implicate a Third Man.

LATTER, BRIDEGROOM, HAD SOME OF LOOT

Wrench Wrapped in Silver Foil "Weapon" With Which Victims Were Intimidated by Prisoners.

Two men were arrested at 10:30 o'clock last night by detectives who had seen them extinguish a street light a few minutes before and had been regarding them with suspicion from a doorway, confessed at the Laclede Avenue Police Station today that in the last month they had participated in 10 hold-ups and three burglaries, using a monkey wrench wrapped in silver foil to make their victims believe it was a revolver. They implicated a third man, who proved to be a bridegroom of one woman, and he was later arrested at his home.

The men who turned out the street light said they were Joseph W. Fess, 28 years old, of Pasadena, Cal., staying at the Plaza Hotel, and John T. Shaw Jr., 32, of 3915 Lincoln avenue. The third man was John J. Ganniger, 27, of 4205 Norfolk avenue. Shaw admitted that the purpose of extinguishing the light was to darken the corner for a prospective holdup. The detectives had guessed as much and had waited several minutes, hoping to catch the two in the act of robbing a victim.

Bride Is Much Surprised. Ganniger's bride, who formerly was Miss Theresa Thompson of Vandeventer avenue and Market street, expressed surprise when the detectives informed her that they were arresting her husband for highway robbery and burglary. Ganniger later admitted that he had taken home two silver shoes and his mother's proceeds of a burglary on South King's highway a few nights ago.

Wilson and Shaw identified two of their victims at the Police Station this morning after the victims had said that they were unable to identify the prisoners.

H. M. Thompson, stopping at the North Side Y. M. C. A., a watchmaker, was amused at the manner in which the prisoners described how they held him up last night. Ganniger signed the crowd that waited for them at the pier and during their ride through the city they were kept busy waving acknowledgments to cheering crowds.

CONSTABLE BUSH INDICED IN BALLOT ALTERING CHARGE

He Is Alleged to Have Scratched Name of Ernest Patillo, Negro, and Written in That of F. M. Slater.

CONTEST OVER 17TH WARD COMMITTEEMAN

Indictment Said to Be Based on Testimony of the Rev. B. F. Abbott, Negro, G. O. P. Judge in 12th Precinct.

The grand jury investigating complaints of fraud in the August primary yesterday voted an indictment against Constable Floyd E. Bush of the Fourth District, Division No. 1, 215 Pontiac Building, of which Harry E. McChesney is the Justice, on a charge of having feloniously altered ballots in the Twelfth Precinct of the Seventeenth Ward, the polling place for which was at 3310 Olive street. The fact of his indictment was published exclusively in the Midday Edition of today's Post-Dispatch.

The charge against Constable Bush, who resides at 4030 Westminster place, is that he feloniously altered ballots, and specifically that he altered the ballot of Ripley J. Gannon, a legalized voter, by writing in the name of Slater. The name of Ernest Patillo, a negro candidate for Republican City Committeeman, was printed on the ballots. Bush supported the candidacy of Frank M. Slater, whose name was not printed on the ballots for committeemen.

Negatives of the Twelfth Ward have made a persistent fight to obtain "redress for frauds which they charge were perpetrated against them in the August primary, at which a number of negroes were candidates for Republican nomination. Overwhelming votes were registered against them on the face of the returns even in precincts heavily populated by negroes.

Probably the bitterest complaints have been those made against what is said to be a negro official in the place for the Twelfth Precinct of the Seventeenth, where the Rev. B. F. Abbott, negro, pastor of the Union Memorial Church, was one of the Republican judges of election. The present grand jury since has indicted a negro official who served in that precinct at the primary except Abbott who, on primary night, made a protest to the Board of Election Commissioners and cut his signature from the returns.

Abbott, who yesterday appeared before the grand jury with five other negroes, and who has told his story in speeches several times since the primary, said that he saw Constable Bush, who was a Republican watcher in the polling place, handling ballots and marking some of them while the returns were being tabulated after the polls had closed.

Abbott said that when he asked Bush for an explanation that the latter replied he was correcting mistakes. Bush later told the Post-Dispatch that he had been asked by several of the judges and clerks to aid in counting the ballots, as they had been unable to agree among themselves regarding the returns.

Another factor which the police considered important in their effort to connect Oliver with the robbery was a patch which they found in the trousers he wore when arrested. The sewing on this patch, in their opinion, closely resembled the sewing on a patch on a pair of overalls found beside the railroad track near the point where the train robbery occurred.

Not Working Aug. 18. Examination of Oliver's working record showed that he had left off from his Terminal employment Aug. 17, 18, 19 and 20 last. He did not work the day before the robbery, the day of the robbery and two days after it. Questioned about this, he said he was ill on those days.

Further investigation showed that although his salary was only $125 a month, he bought $2000 of Liberty Bonds last May and bought $2400 more of Liberty Bonds early in September, about a week after the train robbery.

A United States Department of Justice record from New Orleans, furnished to the police by Federal Control of Ineboli, a seaport on the Atchafalaya coast of the Black Sea, has been assumed by the Russian Bolsheviks, according to a report reaching this city. Col. Cullenoff, who has been identified with the Russian Soviet Government, is said to have appeared when a steamer reached Ineboli and to have prevented the landing of passengers. It is asserted he declared that he had orders from the Soviet Government to permit assistance to reach the Turks except from the Bolsheviks.

$35,000 MAIL CAR HOLDUP CHARGED TO TERMINAL WORKER

Federal Warrant Issued for Alfred A. Oliver, Airbrake Inspector, in Robbery of Last August.

ARRESTED WHEN HE TRIED TO SELL RINGS

Platinum in His Possession Identified as Having Been Stolen in Missouri Pacific Holdup.

A Federal warrant was issued today charging Alfred A. Oliver, 29 years old, of 3139A Park avenue, an airbrake inspector for the Terminal Railroad Association, with complicity in the mail robbery of Missouri Pacific passenger train No. 5 near Tower Grove Station the night of Aug. 18 last, when registered mail containing more than $25,000 in cash was stolen by two men who threw five mail pouches from the train after covering the mail clerks with revolvers.

The warrant charges that Oliver entered a railway mail car with intent to steal, that he assaulted clerks on the car and that he stole $35,000 in cash, Liberty Bonds of unknown value, two diamond rings, two platinum ring mountings, 10,000 money-order blanks and a string of beads. One count in the warrant says that the two platinum ring mountings found in his possession were identified as part of the registered mail stolen from the car.

Released on $10,000 Bond. After the issuance of the warrant Oliver was released on a $10,000 bond signed by Paul V. Browne of 2618 St. Vincent avenue.

Oliver has been held by the police since Nov. 20, when he was arrested by Detectives O'Brien and McGinnis when he was trying to sell two platinum mounted platinum rings in a pawnshop on Market street near Fourteenth street. He said the rings had been given to him by a man known as "Jack Moore," and he had agreed to sell them for this man, who was to give him half the proceeds.

One of the rings was set with a circle of 20 small diamonds, but a larger diamond, which had been the center setting, was missing. The other ring, also of platinum, was unset.

Detectives Kaiser and Wetzel, who had been working on the train robbery case, were called into consultation. Examination of the rings with a microscope showed the number 7779. This was the number of one of the rings reported to have been stolen in the train robbery. It had been sent by registered mail by a New York jewelry house and was destined to a point in Texas. This jewelry house also identified the other ring.

ELECTION FRAUD EASY UNDER PRESENT LAW, GRAND JURY FINDS

Earlier Closing of Saloons, Dance Halls and Poolrooms Urged

THE grand jury, in its report today, expressed the belief that crimes are planned in soft drink saloons, poolrooms and dance halls, where young people congregate late at night, and recommended the passage of laws regulating such places and compelling them to close at hours when legitimate business and amusement houses close. This part of the report was as follows:

"We believe that many crimes are planned and initiated in places where young people congregate late at night, such as soft drink saloons, dance halls and pool rooms. There is no good reason why these places should be kept open long after legitimate business and amusement houses have closed their doors. We also believe that intoxicating liquors are sold in many soft drink saloons, and young people of both sexes resort to these places after midnight. If there are no existing laws to cope with the situation, we recommend the immediate enactment of such laws."

WIRELESS REPORTS ARMENIA NOW A SOVIET REPUBLIC

Russian Reds Declared to Have Entered Erzurum, the Capital.

By the Associated Press. LONDON, Dec. 4.—Russian Soviet troops captured Erzurum, the Armenian capital, on Thursday, and Armenia has declared itself a Soviet republic. It is asserted in a wireless dispatch received from Moscow today. The troops of the old Armenian Government have placed themselves at the disposal of the Soviet administration, the dispatch declares.

"Azerbaijan," the message adds, "has voluntarily renounced the disputed provinces of Zangazur, Nakhichevan, and Nagorno-Karabagh, which have been handed over to Soviet Armenia."

Detectives Kaiser and Wetzel, who had been working on the train robbery case, were called into consultation. Examination of the rings with a microscope showed the number 7779. Report to Judge Hartmann Says Conditions Disclosed in Recent Investigation Amazed Body.

ORIGIN OF FRAUD IN SYSTEM OF COUNTING

Continuation of Inquiry and Women Officials at Polls and Service of Residents Outside Precincts Urged.

Changes in the election laws to render women eligible to serve as judges and clerks of election and to enable the Board of Election Commissioners to draft persons for service as election officials with power to assign them for duty in any part of the city are recommended in the report of the grand jury filed with Judge Hartmann today, which marks the closing of that body's work.

A new grand jury will begin work under direction of Judge Landwehr Monday, and the outgoing jury recommended that its investigation of election frauds, during which 60 indictments have been returned, be continued by the new body.

Amazed at Conditions. The grand jurors report that, although they had heard talk of election frauds under machine domination, they were "amazed" at the conditions their investigation disclosed. Blame for these conditions "rests largely with the public," they assert, however, declaring that unless the people awaken "our work will have been largely in vain."

Frauds were found alike in the river and residential wards, the report says, and in the ranks of both parties. Those "in one party" were found to be more extensive, but the difference exists only because of the better contacts and the "more closely organized factions" in that party, the report declares.

As long as party committeemen have the power to name judges and clerks and so long as they can find men who will serve in those positions and do as they are told, committeemen can perpetuate their selfish interests in power and to their parties nominees who often are unfit for public office, the report asserts.

Origin of Corruption. This system enables committeemen really to pick judges and clerks who are to receive the votes in their wards, and make trades with other committeemen by which those candidates are nominated, the grand jurors point out.

In certain precincts the returns checked by the grand jurors indicate that the ballots only have been counted to ascertain the total number and then they have been apportioned, the bulk to the machine slates, with only one or two to their opponents, the report says.

Origin of the corruption which has been practiced in the election system is with the practice by which the Democratic election judges and clerks count the Democratic ballots and the Republicans count their own, with little regard to the activities of the other, the jurors charge.

Election Investigation. With reference to its investigation of election frauds, the Grand Jury, in its report, says:

"Since Nov. 8, this jury has devoted most of its time to the investigation of frauds committed at the primary election of August 3, 1920. The members of this jury, like the members of the general public, had heard that in primary elections the votes were counted as the 'machines' directed, but we were amazed at the conditions disclosed by the opening of the ballot boxes. Unless the public is aroused by the facts shown in the indictments returned by us, our work will have been in vain. Too much emphasis can not be laid on the fact that the blame for existing political conditions rests largely with the public."

"We have returned a number of indictments charging judges and clerks of election with making false returns to the Board of Election Commissioners of the votes cast in certain precincts. There are, no doubt, many more precincts in which fraud was practiced and these precincts can be readily ascertained by a glance at the returns. Where certain candidates known to have the support of the organization or machine in a particular ward and precinct are credited with all, or almost all, the votes cast, and other candidates, sometimes men of wide acquaintance and popularity, are credited with no votes, or with two or three votes, the fraud is evident."

ABANDONMENT OF JUSTICE OF PEACE COURTS HERE

Chicago Judge Advocates
Municipal Courts for St.
Louis and Kansas City Before Bar Association.

J. P. TRIBUNALS
"CHEAP," HE SAYS

Court Over Which He Presides as Chief Justice Has 30 Associate Judges; Landis Speaks Tonight.

Chief Justice Harry Olson of the Chicago Municipal Court, speaking before the session today of the Missouri Bar Association convention at Hotel Statler, urged the abolition of the Justice of Peace courts of St.
Louis and Kansas City, and the substitution thereof of a municipal court system similar to that of Chicago, which has been in operation for 14 years, replacing the Justice of the Peace courts.

Judge Olson's address was entitled, "The Municipal Court of Chicago and its Psychopathic Laboratory." The Missouri Bar Association annual convention opened yesterday and will end tonight, when Federal Judge Keneaw Mountain Landis of Chicago will speak at a banquet.

Justice Courts "Cheap."
"There is too much whispering to the Judge in these cheap courts," said Judge Olson, referring to the Justice Courts. "They are not efficient and for that reason should be abolished. We have to have good courts, from lowest to highest, in this day of radicalism and Bolshevism. We cannot have good courts for the rich in big litigation and courts not so good for the poor."

"Let me compare the municipal court idea with a tailoring system.
A case comes to first trial—that's your suit, and the trial Judge cuts the cloth. If the cutter is an inefficient worker in a cheap place, that suit is going to be carried to a better place and there the Judge understands the case will be reversed, remanded to the trial court. Why not have a highly efficient court to begin with and save all that time and expense?"

"The Justices of the Peace and Justices as officials for the disposition of minor cases, came West from the New England States with the New England township government, and from Virginia through the Southern States with the county system of government."

Chicago Municipal Court.
The Chicago Municipal Court consists of an executive officer, known as the Chief Justice, and 30 Associate Justices. There are 37 divisions of the court and additional judges may be called in from the State when the volume of business warrants. There is a Chief Clerk, who has 184 deputies, and a Chief Bailiff, with 161 deputies. The 5000 police officers of the city are ex-officio bailliffs.

"The psychopathic laboratory connected with the court has a director and three assistants."

"The only cases the Municipal Court does not try are for divorce, chancery (equity suits), felonies (except for preliminary hearings), and personal injury suits for over $1000.
It has jurisdiction in all other suits for money. If you sued for a million dollars in Chicago it would be in this court."

"It is comparable to police courts because it is the final jurisdiction in misdemeanors. If you disobey a traffic policeman on Michigan boulevard, to the Municipal Court you come."

"The Court has had to threaten to discipline a Chief of Police and has disciplined one of its own Judges; this latter power is very important and effective in maintaining a high standard of conduct in office."

"The criminal side of the court includes the Court of Domestic Relations, the Morals Court, the Boys' Court, the Automobile Court, one or more criminal courts and miscellaneous sections. Among the civil branches is the Foreclosure Detainer and Distress for Rent Branch."

Handling Cases of Insanity.
"The Psychopathic Laboratory was established in 1914. If we question the mentality or condition of a defendant, the laboratory can give us a report on the defendant within an hour and a half. During the last two years we discovered in that way 800 insane persons and sent them to asylums. The system is very helpful in the administration of justice."

For instance, a youth with dementia praecox might threaten to kill you or even do so, without realizing the gravity of his crime; his condition must be taken into consideration."

Judge Olson discussed the history and growth of the court system at considerable length and quoted numerous statistics to show its value. He said there had been a movement in Missouri about 10 years ago for a modern municipal court system for St. Louis and Kansas City, and that about this time he was speaking on the subject in the Capitol at Jefferson City, but the building burned then, his engagement was cancelled and the movement ceased.

Philip Schneider Wounds
William Roessell When Latter Threatens Oscar Zettler With Revolver.

VICTIM IN CRITICAL STATE AT HOSPITAL

Says He Had Been Drinking and Has No Recollection of What Happened During Afternoon.

William Roessell, 26 years old, of 1302 Webster avenue, is at the city hospital today in a critical condition from a bullet wound in the right side of his chest, inflicted yesterday at 5 p. m. by Philip Schneider, a jeweler of 2316 Chouteau avenue, while Roessell was going through the maneuvers of a holdup in the store of Oscar Zettler, a locksmith at 2318 Chouteau avenue.

Roessell told the police that he had been drinking during the early afternoon, and that he did not remember any of the events preceding the shooting.

short time in charge of his daughter, Hazel, 18 years old. His wife, Mrs.
Sue Zettler, and two other children were in a room in the rear of the store.

Claims Pistol as Own.
When Roessell entered he asked for a pistol which he said he had left in the store. "You have to answer me," said Roessell, "I have a pistol lying behind the counter
which, it afterwards was established,
had been left by a negro. Hazel handed over the weapon and Roessell
took two cartridges from a pocket, inserting them in the revolver. He then asked for more cartridges."

"Father doesn't allow anyone to put bullets in a revolver in the store," Hazel remarked.

"Now, you never mind and get into that back room," Roessell replied, pointing the revolver at her. He then walked behind the counter and scanned up some cartridges lying there.

Daughter Runs to Jeweler.
At that juncture, Irvin Cherry, 24, of 1213 South Jefferson avenue, a customer who had been in the store up his hands and got into that back room," Roessell ordered, pointing the revolver at Cherry.

He followed Cherry and Hazel into the rear room, Hazel pleading for her father. "You have to answer me," said Roessell, "I have a pistol lying behind the counter
which, it afterwards was established,
had been left by a negro. Hazel
handed over the weapon and Roessell
took two cartridges from a pocket,
inserting them in the revolver. He
then asked for more cartridges."

"Father doesn't allow anyone to put bullets in a revolver in the store," Hazel remarked.

"Now, you never mind and get into
that back room," Roessell replied,
pointing the revolver at her. He then walked behind the counter and scanned up some cartridges lying there.

Cartridges Miss Fire.
Roessell repeated his demand for money and Zettler lowered his hands to his pockets up and a beat later
he handed over the money. "Now come in here," and Roessell ordered him to put up his hands. Zettler complied.

"How much money have you got?" Roessell demanded.
"Not very much, but I have a wife and seven children; please don't shoot," Zettler replied.

Roessell Miss Fire.
Roessell repeated his demand for money and Zettler lowered his hands
to his pockets up and a beat later
he handed over the money. "Now

him to put up his hands. Zettler
complied.

three votes, it is evident that the count of the votes is false and fraudulent.

"We found this condition to be widespread throughout the city. It exists in river wards and in residential wards, and both the political parties represented in the polls places are at fault. The more glaring instances of false counting seem to have occurred with respect to the candidates of one party, but this may have been due to the keener observation and the activity of well-organized factions in that party."

Points to Illegal Custom.
"A custom is in vogue in many precincts whereby the Democratic judges and clerks count the Democratic ballots and the Republican judges and clerks count the Republican ballots. This is contrary to law and is the starting point of the fraudulent counting."

"To recommend a comprehensive scheme of laws designed to minimize fraud at elections is without the province of this jury, and certainly not practicable in the limited time at our disposal; but we desire to call particular attention to what seem to us to be the most glaring evils connected with the system of

10 Per Cent Tax on Trades in "Futures," Copper Plan

Kansas Senator Makes Public His Proposed Measure to Halt Gambling in Foodstuffs and Cotton.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—Senator Capper of Kansas today made public his proposed bill to stop gambling in foodstuffs and cotton.

A tax of 10 per cent, designed to be prohibitive, on "futures" trading in grain and cotton, except by actual owners of a limited class of traders under Federal license, is the basic feature of the bill, which is to be introduced in the Senate next week by the author and in the House by Representative Tamm, Republican of Kansas. The 10 per cent tax would apply to options and the measure would affect grain products as well as raw grain.

"The bill will stop gambling in wheat, corn, cotton and other farm products," said Senator Capper. "It will eliminate the wheat pit and the blackboard. It will put out of business the thousands of wire houses and bucketshops . . . by making it impossible for gamblers and speculators to deal on boards of trade."

Legislative Preserved.
"The bill undertakes to preserve the legitimate 'hedge,' but cuts out all gambling and manipulations." Farmers, dealers and manufacturers buying or selling grain or cotton for actual delivery would not be restricted by the proposed law, Senator Capper said.

Penalties of $50 per cent of the proposed Federal tax, a fine of $10,000 and one year's imprisonment for violation of the bill's provisions are incorporated in the Capper bill.

Sellers of grain products and cotton, who at the time of sale would be owners of the actual physical property, and traders regularly engaged in growing, dealing in or manufacturing and registered with the Internal Revenue Bureau, would be exempt from the 10 per cent tax.
Such traders, however, would be limited in their dealings to three times their actual transactions during the preceding year, and would be required to report all dealings to the Internal revenue bureau.

In a statement outlining his bill,
Senator Capper declared that only about 1 per cent of "futures" trading in grain and cotton was bona fide.
Millions of dollars were lost by farmers, as well as speculators, in the recent bear raid of the grain markets, Senator Capper declared, asserting that consumers as well as producers were the victims.

Corn Crop Sold 14 Times.
"The Chicago Board of Trade as now conducted," said Senator Capper, "is the world's greatest gambling institution. More wheat was sold in Chicago in the month of October than was raised in the entire United States. This year the Chicago corn crop was sold 14 times in Chicago before a bushel of corn had reached the markets. Only about 1 per cent of the trading done in futures is a bona fide transaction for actual delivery."

"There is not the slightest doubt that the gigantic raid made by the bears on the Board of Trade was the chief cause of the recent disastrous slump in the price of farm products."
Because a lot of market gamblers find it convenient to place the daily quotations, the farmer who has been forced to sell his hogs and cattle at a loss while meat still sells at war prices, is again made the goat.

Says Brokers "Cleaned Up."
"The farmer already has lost more than a billion dollars by the bear raid. Brokers and commission houses have cleaned up over $40,- 000,000 in margins and commissions alone. The lambs who play the market have lost more than $100,- 000,000 in the last 30 days in speculating in cotton and wheat."

"I find all grain and cotton dealers, millers and spinners recognize the evils of the present system and are anxious to stop gambling in food products. They will heartily support this measure to place the business on a legitimate basis. I am also assured of the support of the farm organizations. The commission houses, brokers, bucketshops and market speculators generally will fight it."

But that the ballot boxes be sent sealed and intact to the Board of Election Commissioners and the ballots counted by experts under proper supervision.

Favors Uniform Laws.
"This jury believes that election laws should be uniform as possible throughout the State."

"There is pressing need of the amendment or recasting of our election laws, and we are of opinion that immediate steps should be taken to that end by all persons and organizations interested in good government. Bills should be prepared for presentation to the Legislature, and the Bar Association should lend their aid to the end that proposed legislation be so uniform and systematic that the test of judicial scrutiny offices, and if the people hope to name at that primary the men who are to compete for the important offices to be filled at the spring election, it is imperative that immediate steps be taken to change conditions."

"We recommend that the investigation of offenses against the elec-

The remainder of the report was taken up with a review of conditions in city institutions.

The grand jury reported 97 true bills and ignored 14 cases because of insufficient evidence.

IRISH REPUBLICANS APPEAL TO SINN FEU FOR TRUCE

Galway County Council Says Reign of Terrorism Hurts
Both England and Ireland.

By the Associated Press.
DUBLIN, Dec. 4.—Resolutions appealing to the Irish Republican Parliament to negotiate a truce with a view of securing an honorable peace were passed by the Galway County Council, a Republican body, yesterday. The resolutions expressed the opinion that the British Government should withdraw the ban on meetings of the Irish Republican Parliament so that the latter might appoint delegates. They declared the present reign of shootings and burnings, reprisals and counter reprisals detrimental to the interests of both England and Ireland.

It was ordered that this resolution should be sent to Premier Lloyd George together with the resolution passed by the Galway Urban Council supporting the appeal of Roger N.
Sweetman, Sinn Fein member of Parliament for North Wexford, suggesting a truce. It is said that the belief exists that Sweetman, a Sinn Fein member, was not acting solely in his own behalf in making his proposal.

court. The indictments against 12 men, in two different precincts, had been returned previously.

The figures on the vote for Republican candidates for Circuit Judge had been awaited with interest, with the idea that possibly the relative standing of some of the candidates might be changed by the corrected figures for these precincts.

William H. Killoran's plurality over Judge Shields in the primary, on the Judges' and clerks' returns, was only 461.

Other small pluralities in the Republican primary, on the original returns, were those of Richter over Carriere for Conner, 181, and Watts over Cahill for Seventeenth Ward Alderman, 435.

Miscounting Shown.
The corrected figures of the grand jury show a net addition of 67 to that carried by the original returns of 264 from Killoran's vote. This makes a difference of 331 in the contest between them, and reduces Killoran's plurality to 130. The mis-counting was shown to be in Killoran's favor in eight precincts, and in Shields' favor in two precincts. These were the Twelfth Ward, Sixteenth Precinct, where the judges and clerks gave Shields 68 votes more than he received, and the First Ward, Second Precinct, where Shields was credited with 33 votes too many. In these two precincts Killoran was deprived of 38 votes to which he was entitled.

In the case of Richter and Carriere, the corrected figures increase Richter's plurality to 548. In the case of the contest for Alderman between Watts and Cahill, no material change is made, the vote of both Watts and Cahill suffering a slight reduction.

Even if the changes were sufficient to affect the result, there would be no effect on the status of the city officers, who have since been elected to the offices they sought.

Delegate Valquez of Paraguay explained the negative vote he cast Thursday on the resolution postponing consideration of amendments.
The negative vote of the Paraguayan delegate, which had been overlooked at the time, he said, did not signify opposition to the principle of the amendment or the declaration of the covenant. He declared himself in favor of compulsory jurisdiction for the international tribunal.

George Nicoll Barnes of the British delegation, resisted strong pressure exerted to have him withdraw his demand, insisting on an explanation by the council of the league as to why it had not intervened between the Poles and the Bolsheviks.
He said he thought the council should have done something. Barnes conceded there were some hypothetical circumstances in which the council could not interfere, for instance, in the event of war between the United States and Mexico, but he declared this case was different.

Russia Repulsed Advances.
Leon Barzorgis, replying to Barnes, not for force council, he

the Soviet Government had repulsed

56 GANGSTERS AND OTHER SUSPECTS TAKEN IN RAIDS

Police Find Burglars' Tools and State Auto Licenses at Saloon at Twenty-Second and Madison.

Raids conducted last night by uniformed policemen and detectives, none of them belonging to Capt.
Stinger's newly-created police "Clean-up Division," resulted in the arrest of 56 known gangsters and police characters and a number of other suspects who were locked up at various police stations.

The raids were in compliance with Chief O'Brien's order to "clean up" the city by frequent arrest of known police characters in an effort to force them to leave the city.

"Jimmy" and "Reverend" Found.
A "duckbill jimmy," such as is used by burglars; a slung-shot, covered with canvas; three loaded pistols and two State automobile licenses were found behind the bar and in the rear room of a saloon at Twenty-second and Madison streets shortly before midnight, by detectives, who arrested five men they found there. Detectives know the place as the "Red Hot Bar," and say it is conducted by Matt Donnelly.
The automobile licenses had been issued to reputable persons, one of them being for a delivery truck and the other for a pleasure car.

The barkeeper, William Totten, 48 years old, of 1414 North Twenty-second street; John Cuddy, 39, 419 Wash street, and three police characters who were in the saloon were arrested.

Six at Walters' Club.
Six men found at the Walters' Club, 705 1/2 Pine street, were taken to Central District where they are held for investigation.

John Donaldson, 68 years old, proprietor of a rooming house at 202 North Thirteenth street, and one of his roomers were arrested at 5 p. m. yesterday at the rooming house when detectives found there a quantity of shirtwaists and skirts, on which they placed a valuation of $200.

Michael Slous, proprietor of a saloon at 2138 Franklin avenue, and his barkeeper, Joseph Markovich, of 224 Franklin avenue, were arrested by detectives making a trip of observation to the saloon, when the detectives saw one of the men overturn something beneath the bar and heard a resultant "gurgle" in the sink, as they entered. An overturned glass pitcher about which they said there was an odor resembling that of whiskey, was found beneath the bar. The detectives went to the second floor of the place and found there two barrels of grape mash and 32 gallons of grape mash, which was in six containers. They also found three bottles of wine in the trunk of a roomer, who was not arrested, after he had explained a woman friend gave him the wine.

"Cuckoo" Gangsters Arrested.
On information obtained at the St. Louis saloon the officers went to the home of Nick Negroven, 824 North Twenty-second street, where they found two barrels of grape mash on the third floor. Negroven was not at home.

Three police characters were arrested at the saloon of William Egan, Fourteenth street and Franklin avenue. Egan was not there.

Four known members of the "cuckoo" gang, a gang consisting of the lower Chouteau avenue district, were found together at the corner of Sixth and Hickory streets, and were arrested. Arrests of members of this gang are especially frequent.

BASEBALL GAMBLER TO BE AMPUTATED, SAYS JUDGE LANDIS

Federal Jurist Says He Is Not Going to Have Brass Band to Lead the Way, Either.

HERE TO ADDRESS BAR ASSOCIATION

Declares He Has Some Fresh Notions on Needs of Country; Control of Sleeping Cars One of Them.

Judge Keneaw Mountain Landis of Chicago, whose known vigor of action and utterance recently has been leveled upon to rid baseball of professional gambling, came to St. Louis today to speak tonight at the annual banquet in Hotel Statler of the Missouri Bar Association.

When asked for an interview, the Judge replied that he had some fresh notions on the needs of the country. "Right now I recognize as chief among those needs the need for some established control of sleeping cars," he said. "Some Socrates on the car I came down in last night was discussing a constitutional question of propriety with an idiot—I knew the other fellow for an idiot for no one but an idiot would listen to a discussion begun in Chicago and dropped far into the night and into my distressed, wakeful ears."

Not going to have brass band. As between liquor law enforcement and the suppression of gambling in baseball, the Judge chose baseball for first discussion. "You can feel very sure that the professional gambler will be amputated from baseball," he said. "I'm not going to have a brass band to lead the way, but I feel very sure that you will be very sure sometime not far distant that this amputation has occurred."

He added that he could say nothing further pending the signing next Saturday in New York of the formal agreement naming him as the one-man court of last resort in baseball controversy. He said that he would touch tonight upon the question raised in isolated places concerning his right to be a United States Judge and judge in baseball simultaneously.

During the interview he called up the heads of the National and American League teams in St. Louis and invited them to meet him during the day. "Bring your playing managers along if you can," he said to each.

Discusses Dry Laws. Concerning liquor law enforcement, Judge Landis said: "The present laws against the liquor traffic are the result of 50 years' discussion and came into existence because of the persistent indecency of the breweries and distilleries in their attempt to run the United States, and each State, county and town thereof."

"This law is entitled to a good, fair trial. By that I mean that every existing administrative and judicial officer must stand up just as straight behind this law as he does behind the anti-burglary law and, of course, it is not necessary for a stranger to point out in St. Louis the desirability of stopping burglaries."

Judge Landis, referring to the custom of some courts in freely granting paroles, said: "Get 'em and keep 'em when you get 'em. If you get 'em and let 'em go, they go back to their professions."

The Judge will return to Chicago on a late train tonight.

AMERICA NEAR BREAK WITH ALLIES OVER GERMAN CABLES

U. S. Commissioner Says Limit of Concessions This Country Will Make Has Almost Been Reached.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—The American Government has almost reached the limit of the concessions it is willing to make to the allies and associated Powers with regard to the disposition of the former German cables, it was made known today by one of the American commissioners to the International Communications conference now in session here. The commissioner said the negotiations have been dragging for some time without any immediate indication that an agreement would be reached.

Officials would not indicate what might follow the breaking of the conference, which has appeared imminent, as a result of the unwillingness of some of the Powers represented to reach what the American representatives consider an equitable distribution of the former German cables.

The United States has insisted that its cable communication with Germany, which was interrupted as a result of the diversion of the German cables by the allies should be restored. Great Britain is understood to have expressed a willingness to restore the cable which formerly ran from Emden to New York, but which has been diverted to connect Penzance with Halifax only on condition that it remain in British hands.

VASSAR RELIEF WORKER TELLS OF AID IN FRANCE KILLS SELF BY GAS

Miss Elsa M. Butler Established Dairy Farm to Provide Milk for Poor.

Miss Elsa M. Butler, who went to France a year ago to take charge of the civilian relief work which had been begun by the Vassar College unit at Verdun, returned Thursday night to her home, 201 Westgate avenue, and today addressed the Associated Vassar Alumnae at luncheon at Hotel Statler.

In an interview Miss Butler told of the dairy farm, milk distributing station and dispensary which ministered to the people who returned to Verdun after the war to find nothing but ruin and chaos. After the first emergency through which the Vassar unit conducted canteens, when the people had got makeshift roofs over their heads and provisions in their stores, the great need, especially on account of the children and very old people, was milk.

German Cattle Disposed. Cattle sent in by Germany had foot and mouth disease, which infection spread until there remained no milk supply in Verdun. It wasn't a question of poverty, for the family of the Mayor and others as highly placed were just as badly in want of milk as those who had not the wherewithal with which to purchase it.

Luxembourg, which state had adopted Verdun to help with its reconstruction, at length, at the suggestion of Miss Lambie, one of the earlier directors of the Vassar relief work, contributed 18 head of cattle, and the milk distributing station was established.

At first these animals were boarded out, but this system proving unsatisfactory, at the point where Miss Butler took charge, a farm was put at her disposal, buildings were erected, and rude, but cleanly dairy equipment installed.

At this time 250 families are being served by the Vassar milk station, and in proof of the efficacy of the baby welfare work done through the dispensary and purification of the milk supply, the infant death rate, which, in Verdun before the war, was 140 per 1000, has been reduced this year to 76 per one 1000, which figures compare favorably with statistics in cities such as St. Louis.

Regular Aid Now Given. Miss Butler during her year in charge of the work succeeded in interesting a group of physicians at Nancy in the dispensary as a nucleus for medical aid so that now medical specialists are making regular trips and give free treatment to the needy people of Verdun. She also obtained from the Red Cross dental equipment and other instruments for the use of the specialists.

Miss Butler wished to emphasize the idea that the French people themselves are supplying lands, funds, labor, entire co-operations in all relief work, their need from outside sources being the initiative and direction of trained social workers. Miss Butler is the daughter of William M. Butler, principal of Yeatman High School. She is a Vassar alumna and before her work in France was a social worker associated with Miss Julia Stimson at Washington University Hospital, with the southwestern division of the Red Cross and as a teacher and writer upon sociological subjects.

MINISTER TO SPEAK FROM CHAIR

The Rev. Edmund Duckworth Not Yet Recovered From Operation.

Speaking from a chair, Rev. Edmund Duckworth, rector of the Church of the Redeemer, Euclid avenue and Washington boulevard, will preach at the 11 o'clock service tomorrow morning on "All Holy Scriptures Were Written for Our Learning."

He has been ill for the last 12 weeks at St. Luke's Hospital, where he underwent an operation.

H. B. DAVIS, ATTORNEY, KILLS SELF BY GAS

Body of Man, Whose Removal as Administrator Was Asked for, Found in Kitchen.

Henry B. Davis, 63 years old, an attorney, with offices in the Granite Building, ended his life yesterday at his home, 5240 Kensington avenue, by inhaling fuel gas from a kitchen stove.

His wife, Mrs. Mary Davis, and her sister, Mrs. Sarah Sawyer, found all of the doors of the house locked when they returned at 5 p. m. from a shopping trip downtown. A glass in a kitchen window was broken so that they could gain an entrance. All of the jets of the stove and those of a water heater had been opened. Davis was found sitting near the stove. A physician stated he had been dead an hour.

A note which was found on the kitchen table, addressed to Mrs. Davis, read:

"I have tried to do this for three days. You are the greatest woman in the world and you have made a gallant effort, but nothing can save me. Good-by, Henry."

Mrs. Davis told the police that for two years or more her husband had been suffering from a cancer, which caused him great pain. In the last few days the pain seemed to grow more intense, but he apparently was feeling better yesterday morning as he left home to go to his office at 8:30 a. m., she said. She left at 11 o'clock.

On last Wednesday a petition was filed in the Probate Court asking for the removal of Davis as administrator of the estate of the late Amasa Robinson, an Alton, Ill., coal dealer, alleging that Davis had failed to make final settlement of a sum amounting approximately $2500. Davis took charge of the Missouri property of Robinson on petition of the latter's heirs, and had been handling the estate for several years. Some time ago Judge Holtcamp, at the instance of E. M. Dorsey of Alton, ditched Davis to make settlement, but he failed to comply with the order. In the petition to revoke letters of administration granted to him judgment for any amount found due the estate was asked against him and the surety on his bond.

WOMAN IN MALE ATTIRE IS ARRESTED IN KIRKWOOD

Says She Is Waitress and on Her Way to Join Husband at Greeley, Colo.

Constable Louis H. Hollman yesterday arrested Mrs. Lydia Robinson, 25 years old, of Greeley, Colo., who was dressed in male attire, as she stepped out of a restaurant in Kirkwood.

At Clayton Mrs. Robinson told Sheriff Bopp that she had come to St. Louis from Evansville, Ind., where she had worked as a waitress, and was on her way to rejoin her husband in Colorado. She said her husband had given out here, so she determined to beat her way there. Yesterday morning she purchased a suit of men's clothing from a second-hand store. She then cut off her hair and placed it in a suit case containing her clothes and sent it by express to her husband.

The St. Louis County Welfare Association has taken her in charge pending verification of her story.

NOMINATIONS FOR STATE SENATE ARE VALID, BOARD RULES

Election Commissioners Hold Selection Either by Party Primary or City Committee Is Sufficient.

Nominations of three candidates for the State Senate in the thirty-second (St. Louis) District to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Conway Elder, Supreme Judge-elect, are held to be valid under a ruling by the Board of Election Commissioners last night, that party primaries held by Democrats and Republicans will stand and that selection by city central committee, used by the Socialists, also is sufficient. This establishes the nomination of Henry W. (Harry) Blodgett, Republican; Lawrence C. Kingsland, Democrat; and Jacob Grimm, Socialist. These men will contest at a special election to be held Dec. 18.

Blodgett Named Again. To make quadruply certain in Blodgett's case the Republican City Committee met at 1 p. m. today and nominated him again. The Democratic City Committee will take similar action in Kingsland's case at 4 p. m. Monday.

It had been thought that all the filings in these cases would have to be made 15 days before the election, hence the hurry to get everything completed as to the nominations yesterday, but the Election Board has ruled that 10 days, instead of 15, is the legal minimum.

Blodgett already has been named at a District primary by the District Senatorial Committee and petitions have been circulated for him. Kingsland is the choice of a Democratic primary yesterday in which 167 votes were cast and in which he got all but three, John Keegan, defeated candidate for the Legislature, getting two and J. Slavin one. Grimm is the choice of a Socialist District convention and the Socialist City Committee.

15 YEARS FOR ONE OF ROBBERS OF MAIL CAR AT COUNCIL BLUFFS

Keith Collins Pleads Guilty—Said to Have Thrown $500,000 in Bonds Into River.

DES MOINES, Ia., Dec. 4.—Keith Collins pleaded guilty in the United States District Court yesterday to charges of robbing the United States mails in connection with the Burlington road holdup at Council Bluffs, Ia., Nov. 13.

Judge Martin J. Wade sentenced him to 15 years in prison. Collins was calm throughout the hearing and immediately after being sentenced wrote a letter to his mother. When the case was called the Court was told that Collins took about $50,000 cash and more than $1,000,000 in bonds from the postal pouches, and retained about $25,000 cash as his share of the bonds and securities about $500,000 was burned, it was claimed by Collins, and the other $500,000 thrown into the Missouri River at Council Bluffs. Most of the cash retained by Collins was said to have been recovered.

ALDERMEN UNANIMOUSLY PASS BILL INCREASING NURSES' PAY

Measure Fixes Salary at $90 a Month the First Year, $95 Second, $100 Third and Thereafter.

The Board of Aldermen yesterday unanimously passed a bill for increasing salaries of nurses in the city hospital. The new schedule of salaries for graduate nurses, which compare favorably with those of private institutions of the city, is $90 a month for the first year, $95 in the second year and $100 in the third year and thereafter. Student nurses' salaries are increased from $12 to $15 for the first year, $16 to $20 for the second and $20 to $25 for the third, including board and living quarters.

The ordinance also provides $110 a month for nurses who work among infectious diseases because of the extra hazard. The salaries provided are said to be higher than those paid by other cities for similar services.

MAYOR REPEATS INTENTION OF SEEKING RENOMINATION

Kiel Makes Announcement on Receipt of Petition Urging His Candidacy.

Mayor Kiel, upon receipt yesterday of a petition signed by 100 personal, business and political friends urging him to become a candidate for the Republican nomination for a third term as Mayor, repeated his announcement, first made about six months ago, that he would seek renomination.

The petition contains statements that the two Kiel administrations have been progressive, that the continued advancement of the city is assured by his continuance in office, and that he has the confidence of all classes of people.

MISSING CLERK'S SHORTAGE NOW IS PLACED AT $80,000

Express Agents Say That Amount in Liberty Bonds Disappeared With Arthur Bennett Smith.

Special agents of the American Railway Express Co., who have been investigating the shortage of Arthur Bennett Smith, 36 years old, 1634 Texas avenue, money clerk of the company, who is a fugitive, told Assistant District Attorney Ely today that the information they had gathered indicated that Smith had stolen about $80,000 worth of Liberty bonds. In their first report to the police yesterday the special agents said that they knew at that time of thefts aggregating $38,400.

A warrant was issued by United States Commissioner Mitchell charging Mitchell with stealing two assignments of Liberty bonds, one of $2000 which was shipped from Washington to New Orleans, and one of $1000 which was shipped from Washington to Kansas City.

Miss Esmey, waitress at the Railroad Y. M. C. A. restaurant, who boards at 2430 Park avenue, told a Post-Dispatch reporter today how she happened to make a trip to Buffalo with Smith.

She became acquainted with him a month before, she said, when he began patronizing the restaurant. He seemed to take a fancy to her and liked to talk to her. He told her that he had plenty of money and did not have to work. All his needs were supplied by his father in California, he said, and his father had sent him $3000 for an automobile. He seemed to take life easy and have a good time.

Shortly before Oct. 15 he told her he was going to Canada to attend a horse race. He said it would be a long trip, and he would be alone, and he would treat her as a sister, just for the sake of having somebody with him.

Spent Money Lavishly. She asserted for the sake of the trip, to Buffalo. They stopped there over night at the Statler, occupying separate rooms. Smith spent money lavishly there and elsewhere on the trip, ordering up lavish meals and giving waiters tips of $3, $4 and $5.

On the trip he asked her to marry him, she says. He told her they would go to California, where his father had a bungalow waiting for him. Recently, he said, he had received a letter from his father urging him to come and bring a wife with him. He said he wanted to settle down.

She refused him, and on account of his importunities she decided not

AIR MAIL PILOT IN NEW ST. LOUIS-TO- CHICAGO RECORD

Maintains Speed of 1228-11
Miles an Hour in Making Flight in 132 Minutes.

A new record for the airplane trip from St. Louis to Chicago was established by Pilot Earl F. Baskey of the Air Mail Service, who made the flight yesterday morning in 132 minutes at an average speed of 1228-11 miles an hour, flying directly to Chicago without making the customary stop at Rantoul, Ill., for gas and oil.

The previous record was held by Russell G. Jones, who made a non-stop flight in 143 minutes on Oct. 15, two days after Baskey went through in two hours, 24 minutes. The first nonstop flight was made in two hours, 40 minutes, by H. C. Brown, that same week.

Baskey left the Forest Park landing field at 10 a. m. and arrived at 12:13 p. m., carrying 178 pounds of mail in six pouches. He used plane No. 16, which was repaired for motor trouble Thursday night. This type of plane is not expected to do better than 70 or 75 miles an hour. The first flights in the St. Louis-Chicago division were made in about three hours and 30 minutes, which was considered exceptionally good speed.

to go any further with him. They returned to St. Louis and Smith told her he was going on to California. She has not seen him since.

Miss Esmey said that was the only place she ever went with Smith, although he took her home once or twice in his car. She denied that he had given her a diamond ring or clothing. She is about 38 years old and attractive. Her home is in Pottsville, Mo. On her return from Buffalo she went home, but returned to St. Louis two weeks ago.

$15,500 of Bonds With Loan Concern. It was learned that $15,500 of the bonds had passed into the possession of the Gallant Loan and Mercantile Co., Fourteenth and Market streets.

A replevin writ was obtained and $6000 of the bonds were taken from the company and it appeared that the balance had been pledged to the Night and Day Bank and an additional writ was obtained against the bank and the Gallant firm. The bank officials said the bonds had been pledged by a customer and demurred against surrendering them, proposing to give a bond for their production later if required. The Sheriff refuses this arrangement and other steps will be taken. A replevin writ was issued also against the Friedman Loan and Mercantile Co. for a $1000 bond. This has not yet been served.

As told in yesterday's Post-Dispatch, Smith was last seen in St. Louis, Oct. 18. He and two companions were arrested in the mortgaged automobile at Garden City, Kan., but were released when it was learned that Smith had bought a ticket for Williams, Ariz., the junction point for the Grand Canyon. He has not been traced beyond that.

COMPLAINS OF WIFE AND SON IN WILL

Testament of A. W. Moise Says Son Changed Name and Wife Left Him.

Complaint that his wife left him and that his son changed his name is made in the will of Albert Welborne Moise, filed for probate today. Moise died at his home, 5208 Verdon avenue, Nov. 30, at the age of 74. He was a lawyer and president of the Moise Adjustment Co. in the Central National Bank building.

The will, made last March, gives his wife's address as 2829 Washington avenue. It bequeaths to her Moise's account with the First National Bank, the value of the account not being stated. "My wife, Marie, having left me, I do not feel justified in leaving more to her. I was at all times willing to take care of and support her," says the will.

In bequeathing $1 to his son, Marshall Welborne Moise, he says the son is now known as "Lyle," having changed his name after his marriage 10 years ago.

To another son, Albert Sydney Moise, he leaves his interest in the adjustment company. Except for a few small bequests to relatives the residue of the estate goes to Flora B. Moise, a daughter-in-law.

To a grandson, Albert W. Moise, he leaves his cavalry saber and photograph, and $1500 insurance to aid him in obtaining an education.

The will provides that a monument shall be erected showing that he was in Lee's army, and was one of the officers paroled at Appomattox, Va., upon Lee's surrender to Grant.

COMMISSION ON WAY TO FIUME TO CONSULT WITH D'ANNUNZIO

Will Urge His Submission to Adriatic Settlement for Interest of Italy.

By the Associated Press. ROME, Dec. 4.—Orders have been sent by the Italian Government to Gen. Caviglia, commander of Italian regular forces, which have established a cordon around Fiume, to avoid all complications or painful incidents. Premier Giolitti declared last night.

The Chamber of Deputies commission appointed to go to Fiume with a view to convincing D'Annunzio that Italy's highest interest requires his submission to the Adriatic settlement, left here last night. Premier Giolitti told the commissioners that Italy would occupy the islands of Veglia and Arbe, awarded to Jugoslavia under the Rapallo agreement.

J. P. Morgan Returns From Europe. By the Associated Press. NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—J. P. Morgan and Mrs. Morgan today returned from a European trip on the steamer Celtic.

FIREMEN'S PETITIONS HELD TO BE SUFFICIENT

Vote on 8-Hour Day Law Assured Unless Aldermen Pass the Ordinance.

Petitions filed by city firemen, asking for a vote of the people upon an ordinance to provide an eight-hour day for them, today were held by the Board of Election Commissioners to be sufficient, and unless the ordinance requested is enacted by the Board of Aldermen the measure will be submitted to the voters, probably at the mayoralty election in April.

The petitions bore 15,737 signatures when they were filed, but in the process of checking, employees of the Election Board deducted 3043 names for various reasons, leaving 13,695 which are valid. This is more than 8 per cent of the 187,344 votes cast at the mayoralty election in April, 1917, while 7 per cent is the maximum which could be required by law for a special election, 5 per cent being sufficient to cause submission of the measure at a regular election.

The signatures deducted were classified as follows: Not registered, 1477; illegible, 68; no address given, 153; handwriting different from that indicated by signature on registration books, 317; signatures questioned, 5; duplications, 22.

Firemen who ask an eight-hour day, now work under an arrangement providing for 38 hours on duty and 24 hours off. The change, according to Comptroller Nolte, would practically double the present annual payroll of the firemen, which is about $1,457,000.

Nolte said that to obtain the additional funds, the city would have to increase taxes 20 cents on the $100 valuation, which it cannot do under the present State Constitution, which fixes the maximum at $1.35 on the $100, which St. Louis already has reached. To make the change would mean the closing of necessary city departments, he said, and he is opposed to it for that reason.

PHYSICIAN, 80, OBTAINS PAROLE

Had Been Convicted of Manslaughter in Girl's Death.

SPECIAL TO THE POST-DISPATCH. KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 4.—Dr. William S. Foster, a white-bearded man, received a parole in Judge Latham's court yesterday on a three-year sentence for manslaughter to the penitentiary. He had performed an illegal operation upon a 19-year-old bride.

"I am 80 years old," he said. "I never have been under arrest before in my life. I did what I did because I thought I was helping the woman. I am asking for this parole because I do not want to spend the last days of my life in the penitentiary."

Practice putting on- WEED Tire Chains in the Garage

It only takes a few moments to attach them when you know how. No jack required.
Study the directions, illustrated on the right.

If you have never followed our instructions for attaching Weed Tire Chains, packed with every pair, you probably have fumbled around, got hot under the collar and falsely accused them of being a nuisance. Learn how easy it is to put Weed Chains on correctly—practice in the garage and instruct your wife, your sister or your daughter. It will repay you in security, satisfaction and comfort.

Weed Chains are also made to meet the demand for an efficient traction and anti-skid device for trucks equipped with single and dual solid tires or with the very large pneumatic tires. They are so constructed that they satisfactorily meet the requirements of heavy truck service in mud, sand or snow.

Books for All Ages Among the New Publications for the Holiday Season

Conducted by OTTO HELLER, Professor of Modern European Literature in Washington University.

By OTTO HELLER. "THE CHILDREN OF ODIN," by Padraic Colum. Illustrations by Willy Pogany. (The Macmillan Co.)

To the classic excellence of the material and the literary skill of its presentation add the perfect understanding expressed in illustrations of the highest artistic order. Of the latter, five are color plates, and there is an abundance of drawings. The great difficulty of negotiating the rich treasure-trove of Norse saga for the benefit of the young has been overcome by the natural gift of one to the manner born. In getting up this book, the publishers have generously co-operated with the author and artist, and the result of the combined efforts, "The Children of Odin," is a book of singular all-round fascination.

"THE JUMBLE BOOK," by David Cory. (George Sully & Co.) Gotten up of much care and fine artistic judgment, in large quarto size. By their variety the contents are sure to appeal to any juvenile taste or fancy. There are Indian stories for the robust, fairy stories for the fastidious, animal stories for the glibly, and all kinds of stories for the omnivorous. Six full page color pictures, and over 100 black and white illustrations into the bargain.

"SONG DEVICES AND JINGLES," by Eleanor Smith. (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co.) A book for young children in which the elements of music are presented in a manner to stimulate unusual attention; written by the Director of Hull House Music School.

UNCENSORED LETTERS OF A CANTEN GIRL A jolly account of the adventuresome life of a canteen girl. Price $1.75

SONS OF LIBERTY By Walter A. Dyer A vivid story of Revolutionary times for boys. Illustrated. Price $1.75

Henry Holt and Company 29 W. 44th Street, New York

and pictures is the book's greatest appeal. It is instructive, constructive, entertaining and companionable, and it is stable, too, biding with poetry, jingles, plays, puzzles, tales, fairy stories, nature studies, things to do, and just lots of pictures, many of them in color.

"PICTURED KNOWLEDGE," published by Compton-Johnson Co. (Compton-McGowan Co., Chicago.) An up-to-date edition of the new method of visual instruction applied to all school subjects, which was started in 1916. The editors and contributors to the series include Calvin N. Kendall, Commissioner of Education of the State of New Jersey; Alfred W. Abrams of the Department of Education of the State of New York; Dr. David Starr Jordan, chancellor emeritus of Leland Stanford Jr. University; Gifford Pinchot, Anna B. Comstock, and many other celebrated exponents of practical education. Beautifully illustrated.

"SEVEN O'CLOCK STORIES," by Robert Gordon Anderson. (G. P. Putnam's Sons.) Youngsters of from 5 to 9 years old will love this chain of stories carrying through them "The Three Happy Children" as very real and much alive central characters. No less than 20 full page illustrations in color by E. Boyd Smith enhance the value of the gift.

"CHATTERBOX" for 1921. (The Page Co.) Since 1912 this juvenile annual has grown in popular favor yearly. "The Chatterbox." It should be recalled, is not made up of rehearsed or old material, but the stories are written, and the illustrations made, expressly for the volume. The new issue is the best of all.

"THE BIG BOOK," by John Martin. (Houghton Mifflin Co.) A remarkably attractive Christmas gift for children, this, and all the more to be appreciated this year because the exigencies of just-after-the-war prevented an issue last year, so the present edition is No. 3 and No. 4 in one. It has been called "The book with the heart," for it appeals strongly to the good natural impulses of youth which have not been artificially deflected in the direction of priggishness. The charming spontaneity of the stories, verses

"REDDY BRANT," by W. C. Tuttle. (Century Co.) "His Adventures" is the remainder of the title. The adventures are the regular kind, with cattle rustlers and train robbers, and pump guns. Through them all, Reddy is doing somebody a good turn. Clyde Forsythe is the illustrator.

"IN THE TRENCHES," by Capt. Charles A. Botsford. (Penn Publishing Co.) Continued adventures of Red Van Horn and Ralph Storm, whom the author has carried through several preceding works, are related in this tale for boys. As the name implies, it treats of active service at the front during the great war.

"JIMMY AND WHITEY," by William S. Hart; being Vol. I of "The Golden West Boys." Houghton-Mifflin Co.) Pretty radical mutations in "tempora" and in "mores" are disclosed by the output of standard publishers. The premier purveyors to the Brahmin caste have discarded their sacerdotal exclusiveness ever since they stepped into the Piper's motley.

PUBLICATIONS PUBLICATIONS

"PETER'S ADVENTURES IN MEADOWLAND," by Florence Smith Vincent. (Frederick A. Stokes Company.) Characterized by a charming imaginative quality, "Peter, the Tree, and the Flower" will be remembered by children as real personalities. Numerous black-and-white illustrations by Harry Coulta.

"THE JEWISH FAIRY BOOK," by Gerald Friedlander. (Frederick A. Stokes Co.) The author states that he has collected his material for this book from various sources, and the list of contents credits the Talmud, the Jewish Chap Book, the Midrash, the Rabbis, and both Hamdruah with their derivation. No attempt has been made to put them in a modern setting and a brief preface states that many of these tales brought comfort to the Children of Israel long ago.

As in every fairy book, there is a story of Magic Apples. This tale in no sense resembles the Scandinavian myth about Iduna and her magic fruit, but a common theme can be traced faintly. King Solomon's Carpet is the title of another story which at once suggests the Arabian Nights, although again the subject matter is

Business is business. The firm that made Boston culture famous is on the job of producing thrillers, for small boys of every age, from a mammoth movie magazine of desperate and stirring adventures.

"JIMMY AND WHITEY," by William S. Hart and pictures the Golden West with a literary skill closely akin to that of an actor-producer has had a whole-some influence on the status of the Western photoplay. As a writer he bids fair to duplicate the success in the corresponding field of fiction.

"PERIWINKLE'S ISLAND," by Edith L. Elms. (J. B. Lippincott Co.) The island is the kind that is reached by a cruise in a dream boat. The hunt for the Creeping, in which the Elastic Dog takes part, is the chief adventure which the author here describes. There are eight illustrations in color by Molly Benatar.

"THE ANIMAL CIRCUS BAND," (George Sully & Co.) Christmas is going to be made still merrier, and the Little Circus Band, have been, for very small Americans, by the coming of the players are enough to make that clear. There's Elephant-Thumb and his big bass drum; Tawny-Mane and his giant horn; Clatter-Hoof and his snare drum; Blowie-Bear and his bright cornet; and Nimble Foot, the cymbal player; all under the direction of Jungle Jim, the band master. They come in colors and are made sufficiently durable to survive the most enthusiastic participation of the kiddies of the land in the antics of the Animal Circus Band.

"OLD FRIENDS IN NEW DRESS," (George Sully & Co.) For slightly more sophisticated juveniles there is Jack and the Beanstalk, Cinderella and the Little Glass Slipper, Puss in Boots, The Night Before Christmas, the Three Bears and Little Red Riding Hood, old friends in new dress, beautifully lithographed and each in its own little box. They will make Christmas merry for those who give them and those who get them.

"THE W. CHUCK FAMILY," by Pauline Stoddard Howard. (John Martin's House, Inc., and Houghton-Mifflin Co.) This book will serve as an introduction to the distinguished country family of the Chucks. You will find them intelligent, friendly, domestic and closely attentive to their occupation, which is gardening. Numerous family portraits by Herman Drucklieb exhibit convincingly the salient physical characteristics of the Chucks.

"PETER," by Arthur S. Hardy. (Houghton-Mifflin Co.) A quiet and touching portrait of a dignified old dog with a capacity for love and loyalty which in his case augments rather than contradicts the impression of fine intelligence. A classic of its kind.

"THE BOY SCOUT YEAR BOOK," edited by Franklin K. Matthews, chief scout librarian, Boy Scouts of America. (Appleton.) The publishers are warranted in calling this "the big boys' book of the year." It is a big and handsome book for boys, and it is a book for big boys, and for some smaller ones. Its 258 pages, with many pictures, contain 13 stories and 24 articles of entirely different from the tale of Haroun's day. The Magic Lamp will similarly bring Aladdin to mind and the Castle in the Air is equally oriental. The Magic Sword of Kenaz, and Jacob the Sabbath Lover are typically Hebrew.

The drawings in the book are vividly colored and evidently follow the style originated by Maxfield Parrish.

"THE THIRD BOOK OF STORIES FOR THE STORY-TELLER," by Fanny E. Cox with illustrations. (Houghton-Mifflin Company.) Drawing its materials from wide and variegated fields, this collection, like its two predecessors, is richly successful in its moral appeal to the young.

"KIDDIE-KAR BOOK," verses by Richard J. Walsh; illustrations by Sarah S. Stillwell Weber. (J. B. Lippincott Co.) O, you who do not understand I'll whisper to you how to do it—A Kiddie-Kar will take you to it.

"THE SEVEN PARSONS AND THE SMALL IGUANODON," by Gerald H. Thayer; illustrations by Norman Jacobson. (G. P. Putnam's Sons.) The drawings are far superior to the verse. "The inverted legend" bears the message, too true alas!—how oft the godliest humans fall to match the goodness of some godless brute. It is pretty hard on the parsons, but not less so on the point to juvenile souls, since the point will happily escape them.

"THE SCOUT OF THE BORDER," by Everett T. Tomlinson. (D. Appleton & Co.) A story of life in the United States army during Gen. Pershing's invasion of Mexico in pursuit of Villa in 1916. Sam and Tom Sloan, sons of an American mine owner, are the chief characters in this tale for boys, and their part in frustrating the plots of Pedro, a Mexican, and Wilhelm, a German spy, is recounted in detail.

Where the book will prove of value to young readers is in the insight it affords into the routine of army life, its regulations and field conditions. The customs of troops in the field are brought out in the course of the narrative, even the measures taken for sanitation being included.

"GAMES FOR BOYS," by G. S. Ripley, Boy Scout executive of Hartford, Conn. (Henry Holt & Co.) Designed for the Boy Scout leader, Y. M. C. A. secretary, camp director, public school physical director and director of boys' clubs, the book covers active games, exercises and water sports for boys of the adolescent and post-adolescent period. A practical and concise text book of recreation work for boys.

"THE LAND OF THE GREAT OUT-OF-DOORS," by Robert Livingston. Illustrated by Maurice Day. (Houghton-Mifflin Co.) How Penrose and Penelope—Pen and Penny for short—came to discover Life (with L) in the country is the theme of this story which aims to instill into young hearts a love of outdoors.

"TWO BOYS IN BEAVERLAND," by Maj. A. Radcliffe Dugmore. (Doubleday, Page & Co.) Two enterprising, wholesome boys, having been wrecked on the shores of Labrador, make shift with given conditions after the fashion of Robinson Crusoe and thereby acquire a lot of useful knowledge along with a lot of fun and general satisfaction.

"OLD FRENCH FAIRY TALES," by Comtesse de Segur. (Penn Publishing Co.) Stories arranged from a collection of tales dating back to the seventeenth century, in which the author has managed to preserve some of the quaintness of the old world language. The book is decorated with color and line drawings by Virginia Sterrett.

"THE HAPPY HUNTING GROUNDS," by Kermit Roosevelt. Illustrated from photographs by the author. (Charles Scribner's Sons.) From his youth the boon companion of his famous sire in his hunting adventures, Capt. Kermit here again proves himself a chip of the fine old block. While not especially designed with an eye to any age limits, the book is sure of enthusiastic reception at the hands of all virile boys. The author's intimate recollections of an idolized national character endow his new volume with enduring value.

"THE BLUE PEARL," by Samuel Scoville Jr. Illustrated by Charles Livingston Bull. (The Century Co.) A book that should satisfy the spirit of exotic adventure in any boy reader. A group of Boy Scouts invades the wilderness of the great Northwest in search of a marvelous blue pearl. There they encounter many obstacles, but push on in the true style of the American lad to final success. In both style and content the book surpasses the usual thrilling tale written for the youth.

"THE SCOUT OF THE GOLDEN CROSS," by Paul H. Gordon. (Henry Holt & Co.) This tale for boys, with its scenes pitched in a town near the Adirondacks, treats of the experiences of a company of Boy Scouts both at home and in their mountain camp. The book could be used as a manual of instruction in some respects, as the points of scout law and field expedients are woven into the narrative. The development of the boy characters in the story, under the influence of scout training, is well brought out.

"THE SHELTON SIX—ANNE," by Grace M. Remick. (Penn Publishing Co.) This tale is one of a new series of the Glenoch books for girls. It is written along much the same lines as previous works by the same author.

"THE YOUNG PILGRIMS," by Charles Herbert. (J. B. Lippincott Co.) The author of "The Score of a Score of Years" recounts in usual Delphic, yet in a sensible and faithful fashion, the story of the birth of the United States. There are many well executed illustrations in the text and, besides, numerous inserted lithographs in color.

"THE STORY OF OUR COUNTRY," by E. Boyd Smith. (Putnam.) A finely conceived task has been beautifully carried out in this richly illustrated book. The pictures done by the author of the text are colorful pages of pageantry, from the visit of the Norsemen to the return of the heroes from the World War. There are 20 full-page color pictures.

"NUOVA OR THE NEW BEE," by Vernon Kellogg. (Houghton-Mifflin Co.) Nuova, a story for children, has all of the charm of the old fairy tale, with this addition: it gives the reader an intimate view of the life of a bee colony. None of the elfin quality of the winged characters is lost because they fly in the realm of fact, not of fancy.

The author, in his peace-time pursuit, is a professor of natural history, and his knowledge of bees is authentic.

The illustrator, Milo Winter, has studied bees, especially the delicate lines of their wings, as he studies all plant and insect life for his decorations. His imagination has full play with relative proportion, yet figures and flowers are carefully drawn. The frontispiece is in full color and the other illustrations are in pen and ink on a cream background.

"MARGERY MORRIS AND PLAIN JANE," by Violet Gordon Gray. (Penn Publishing Co.) This book, which is one of the Margery stories that have been well received, introduces some new girl characters and is a picture of modern girl life.

"LITTLE HEROES OF FRANCE," by Kathleen Burke. Illustrated. (Doubleday, Page & Co.) In this book are collected stories of the little heroes and heroines of France which leads wistful children for all time to come. The author, during the war was particularly active in refugee work and much of what appears in this book came within the bounds of her own experience.

"THE BOY'S LIFE OF LAFAYETTE," by Helen Nicolay. Illustrated. (Harper & Brothers.) Recounts in a most readable fashion the remarkable history of the young runaway nobleman of France who rose to be a Major-General in the American Continental Army before he was 21, and who helped America to gain her independence from England, and France to get a republican form of government.

"JOHNNIE KELLY," by Wilbur S. Boyer. (Houghton-Mifflin Co.) Young Kelly, the son of a policeman, is drawn with a vivid and humorous gift for creating character, in the comedies and tragedies of his public school experience. This is the first book-length story of Mr. Boyer, who is a schoolmaster and popular writer for magazines.

"INDIAN OLD MAN STORIES," by Frank B. Linderman. (Scribner's.) Contains another series of old War Eagle's tales. It is a collection of most fascinating yarns some of which have to do with Indian adventure, while others are drawn from the red man's apparently inexhaustible treasure of folklore. Among the best of the tales are "Why the Weasel is White," "Why Our Sight Is Good With Age," and "Why Children Lose Their Teeth."

"ANITA," by Bertha B. and Ernest Cobb. (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co.) A story of the Rocky Mountain most creditably illustrated from oil or paintings by L. J. Bridgman, photographs by L. C. McClure, and illustrations by Anita Pettibone. The book was written in close collaboration with the heroine and is full of valuable information.

"JOHN BARRING'S HOUSE," by Elsie Singmaster. (Houghton Mifflin Co.) Of this author's numerous works for young readers, this, primarily a book for girls, is probably the most vividly written. Being an absorbing narrative of Goshute days, it achieves a place not merely in juvenile fiction, but in historical literature for the young element.

"Paradise Bend"

by William Patterson White Author of "Hidden Trails," "Lynch Lawyers," etc

—when girls were few and courtship fierce.

Reviews of Gift and Children's Books for the Holidays

"MISSY," by Dana Gatlin. (Double-day, Page & Co.)

A book of the delightfully preposterous dreams, pretenses and adventures of Melissa Merlain. Capital reading for the "flapper" and her seniors. "But surely you admire women who achieve, women like George Eliot and Frances Hodgson Burnett?"

"I'd hate to have to take one of them to a dance," said Mr. Briggs.

"TRUDY AND TIMOTHY AND THE TREES," by Bertha Carter Porter. (The Penn Publishing Co.)

Civil War stories usually have a pronounced tendency towards one side or the other in that conflict, but this tale, written for the younger children, deals in a nonpartisan way with the critical periods of the struggle. The volume is intended to give children who are becoming interested in reading an unprejudiced view of the Civil War period.

"JANET, A TWIN," by Dorothy Whitehill. Illustrated by Thelma Good. (Barne & Hopkins.)

Janet, in spite of being a twin, is not like any other girl. Readers of her own age and sex will relish all the more her progress to the greatest surprise in the world and sit down with her in the end to her full cup of happiness.

"STORIES," by Juliana Horatio Ewing. (Duffield & Co.)

This collection of tales, illustrated by Edna Cooke in a style that recalls the Kate Greenaway pictures of many years ago, might be called a series of children's stories for grown-ups. In the number are "Jack-anapes" and "Daddy Darwin's Dovecote," both of which were popular individually at one time as holiday reading. "The Peace Eggs" is a story designed especially for the Christmas season. Like the work of Louisa Alcott, the book appeals to divers ages.

"IT HAPPENED IN ANDOVER," by James C. Graham. (Houghton Mifflin Co.)

When Mr. Graham wrote these stories of school life at Phillips Academy, Andover, he foresaw that somebody might inquire how so many interesting things happened to happen at that particular school, so he added to the title: "Well, most of it did, anyway." Anyway, what did happen at Phillips Academy, Andover, might have happened some time or other at some other school. Mr. Graham is an Andover master, and he presents a delightful picture of life at that famous preparatory school. The stories deal with typical incidents and escapades and are told with vividness and humor. They are wholesome and diverting and are sure to interest boys between 12 and 18 years of age, and men who went to school when they were between 12 and 18.

"THE SANDMAN'S MOUNTAIN," by Louis Dodge. (Scribner.)

Louis Dodge has written this as "a story for large persons to read to small persons." The reading should be a pleasant matter for both the large and the small persons, and the cleverly drawn and brilliantly colored illustrations add to the book's charm and make it an attractive gift volume. The story is about Giddy, a little boy who makes some strange friends. One, a snail-eating eagle, carries him to a high limb and leaves him sitting astride it; but a friendly bear rescues Giddy, and he has many more adventures with knights, and smugglers, and a sorcerer.

"FOURTH DOWN," by Ralph Henry Barbour. (D. Appleton & Co.)

Here is another Barbour story about school life, especially football as it is played at Yardley. Toby Tucker and George Tubb are opposites but friends. Both are in football, Toby only on the second team but gradually showing the stuff that is in him. Difficulties arise and Toby and Tubb have a hard time of it. Matters reach a climax when a bad boy is set upon at night and given part of what is coming to him. He falsely accuses Toby. Innocence is cleared and guilt properly punished.

shed, and the fourth down comes when Toby gets his chance in the big game of the season.

"DICK ARNOLD PLAYS THE GAME," by Earl Reed Silvers. (D. Appleton & Co.)

Dealing with student life and that exclusively in its athletic and sporting aspects, this realistic college story is intended chiefly for high school boys of the lively age, whose impulse towards alma mater it is likely to accelerate.

"HEAD OF THE LOWER SCHOOL," by Dorothy Moore. Illustrated. (G. P. Putnam's Sons.)

"Little Holland" is a region of marsh flats in Lincolnshire where stands a famous girls' school, headed by the austere Miss Conyngham. Sound about this place a thrilling story of the life of which this book gives the beginning, middle and glorious end.

Although the title of this work would seem to suggest one of the present-day musical comedies, the heroine in reality is a well-meaning little girl who happens occasionally not to do the right thing at the right time. The various situations of the story are told with considerable humor.

"LITTLE FRIEND LYDIA," by Ethel Calvert Phillips. (Houghton Mifflin Co.)

"Vee Ann," by the same author, is here given worthy successor or companion. This is a real Christmas story in spirit as well as setting; bright, cheerful, with an abundance of interesting incidents and four excellent illustrations in color by Edith F. Butler.

"PEGGY STEWART, NAVY GIRL, AT HOME," by Gabrielle E. Jackson. (G. P. Putnam's Sons.)

A story of Annapolis, constituting the first volume of a bright little trilogy in narrative, of which the other parts show the same delightful daughter of Uncle Sam's sea forces in the school girl and debutante stages of her career.

"THE DREADFUL RIVER CAVE," by James W. Wood. (Houghton Mifflin Co.)

The author received this tale more than forty years ago direct from the mouth of Chief Black Elk while campaigning with that red-skinned worthy in the territory of the present Glacier National Park. By its authenticity the work is favorably distinct from the average run of Indian stories. The author is by adoption a member of the Blackfeet tribe.

"JOANNA BUILDS A NEST," by Juliet Wilbur Tompkins. (The Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

Grown-ups and half-grown-ups both likely to extract an hour's enjoyment, by proxy, from the perfectly delicious time Joanna is having in constructing and feathering her charming little nest. The pleasure is enhanced by a number of capital pictures drawn in silhouette by Ethel C. Taylor.

"EVE TO THE RESCUE," by Ethel Hueston. (The Bobbs-Merrill Company.)

A safe and sane, and of course correspondingly unsophisticated, love story. Eve is a D. D. (doctor of domestic difficulties) who follows a wholesome, noninterfering type of practice. Is it a book for children or adults? The reviewer is willing to compromise and say, for both; or call it a "juvenile" for ladies of maturity, of either sex.

"PINOCCHIO," by C. Colliodi. (J. B. Lippincott Co.)

This is a new, more elaborate, edition of the juvenile classic by Carlo Lorenzi, whose non de plume is Colliodi. The quaintness of this Italian fairy story has been well preserved in its translation.

The book is already well known to a large array of youthful readers. Geppetto, the old beggar, carves a puppet from a block of wood. The experiences of this puppet, Pinocchio, reveal the peculiar disposition credited to such creatures among the Italians, and, for generations, have woven a little tangle of their own folklore about them. Pinocchio's adventures with his Good Fairy, with Alidore, the masiff, with his donkey friend Candlewick and with the marionettes of the stage, are presented. Polyphemus and his cave are re-created by the puppet's experience with the fisherman. The conversion into a living boy, as a reward for self-sacrifice and good behavior, is the termination.

The book has 14 illustrations in color by Maria L. Kirk and border decorations illuminate each page.

"BRUTE AND FAIR," by Henry A. Shute. (Cosmopolitan.)

This book, purporting to be a boy's diary, is very entertaining. The spelling and syntax, although of a highly impressionistic style, are not cryptic enough to make it hard reading, and often get a laugh. The author utilizes most of the humorous situations that arise in boyhood, and he handles them cleverly, but the publishers' classification of him with Mark Twain and Booth Tarkington is hardly warranted.

"THE ITALIAN TWINS," by Lucy Fitch Perkins. (Houghton-Mifflin Co.)

Peppo and Bettina, 12-year-old children of the Marchese di Grifoni, are persuaded to follow a pair of strolling gypsies who are making their rounds with a hand organ and performing feat. Once lured from home, the children are compelled by their abductors to earn their keep by singing and dancing. The description of their vagrant life, while the party travels from Florence to Venice, affords the author opportunity to picture Italian scenery and atmosphere in a way to appeal to youthful readers.

The necessary thrills are lent by the fashion in which the children manage to make their escape, and older readers can find interest in the adaptability of the youngsters who support themselves on their home-ward journey by making use of the songs and dances they have been taught. They reach home safely and the story ends with the traditional family outbursts of rejoicing.

"GRIMM'S FAIRY TALES," selected and illustrated by Eleanor Abbott. (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

A very attractive cloth-bound volume, with 13 excellently drawn illustrations in color. Contains the best of Grimm's fairy stories.

"THE COURTSHIP OF MILES STANDISH," by Henry W. Longfellow. (Houghton Mifflin Co.)

This holiday edition of probably the best-loved American narrative poem is illustrated with eight full-page drawings in color, all very beautifully done and full of the atmosphere and spirit of the poem. Ernest W. Longfellow, who describes himself as "a direct descendant of Pricilla and John Alden," contributes a short but very interesting introduction.

"THE STORY OF DR. DOLITTLE," by Hugh Lofting. (Frederick A. Stokes Co.)

The work is dedicated to "children in years and children in heart" and contains a fund of dry humor that can be appreciated by both.

Dr. John Dolittle's adventures are traced from the time when he loses all his patients at Puddleby-on-the-Marsh because of his fondness for keeping pets about the house, down to the period when he becomes the most noted animal doctor in the world by treating dumb animals whose language he acquires. His adventures when summoned to Africa

ca to vaccinate all the monkeys and his subsequent experiences with pirates on the return trip have a Peter Panish flavor that will appeal to the younger element. The quaint dialogues between the doctor and his home manager will interest the juvenile reader. As a sort of modernized fairy story, the book is a success.

"WOOD-FOLK COMEDIES," by William J. Long. (Harper's.)

A happy volume devoted to the play spirit of the creatures of the great outdoors. The author, who once wrote a very interesting book called "How Animals Talk," gives the reader, old or young, a great deal of useful natural history while taking his big and little creatures through their games and amusements. There are seven striking illustrations in color.

"CLINDA OF OZ," by L. Frank Baum. Illustrated by John R. O'Neill. (Reilly & Lee.)

The latest of Mr. Baum's "Oz" series tells about the exciting adventures of Dorothy and Princess Ozma in their hazardous journey to the Mountain of the Flatheads and to the Magic Isle of the Skeezers. There they are imprisoned by the wicked Queen, but are rescued by Glinda, the Good, and the Wizard of Oz.

"ADVENTURES OF THE TEENIE WEENIES," by William Donaghey. Illustrated by the author. (Reilly & Lee.)

A familiar comic supplement feature now issued in book form for the edification and amusement of the very young.

"UNCLE REMUS," by Joel Chandler Harris, with illustrations by A. B. Frost and E. W. Kemble, and an introduction by Thomas Nelson Page. (Appleton.)

There is repeated also the original introduction by Mr. Harris to the first "Uncle Remus" collection. In this, called "The Gift Edition" and substantially bound with copious drawings by two of America's best illustrators, the reader will find practically all the "Uncle Remus" tales, involving the doings of Br'er Rabbit, Br'er Fox and all the other celebrities in old Uncle Remus' zoo.

Scenes of the old Colonial days give this story, which is intended for the younger children, a rather unusual setting. The adventures of the youthful heroine are followed through the early period of our history. It is one of a series of similar volumes.

"QUEERFUL WIDGETS," by Willis Brooks Hawkins. Illustrated by J. Flora Ta'Bois. (Bonl & Live-right.)

Just readable nonsense for very young children, but with a strain of wit and philosophy that older heads may enjoy, while they read to the little ones. Queerful Widget is a little grotesque fairy of the stuff that children's dreams are made of and grotesque and unheard-of things happen when the Queerful Widgets are hard by.

There are 20 color plates and 18 animated maps, drawn with a view to easy comprehension of the geography of the known ancient world by youthful minds. An ideal gift book, affording the young reader an extremely interesting survey of ancient history and the origin of the human race. Prof. Van Loon planned this little volume originally for his two sons, 8 and 12, respectively. It was designed as the first of a series of volumes, telling, in this quaint way, for his boys, the story of 6000 years. The eight other volumes are yet to be written.

"BABS AT COLLEGE," by Alice Ross Colver. (Penn Publishing Co.)

This is the third book of a series by the same author in which the leading character, Babs, appears. In this story she and her friends are introduced in the atmosphere of a New England college.

"THE REMARKABLE TALE OF A WHALE," by Isa L. Wright, with illustrations by John Held Jr., and "THE TALE OF JOHNNY MOUSE," by Elizabeth Gordon Jr., with illustrations by Maginel Wright Enright. (Volland Co.)

Both these tiny books are beautifully illustrated in color. The "Tale of a Whale" is told in amusing nonsense verse, the rhythm and swing of which are excellent. The "Tale of Johnny Mouse" is a prose composition in which Johnny Mouse is taken through a course of extraordinary adventures that are certain to make the little ones gasp with amazement.

"THE HIDDEN TREASURE OF RASMOIA," by Abraham Mitre Ribbany. (Houghton-Mifflin Co.)

Written by an author whose boyhood days were passed in Syria, this tale of an Oriental hunt for treasure affords a quaint picture

ture of the customs and views of life of the Christian settlement near Mount Lebanon in which the writer resided as a youth. The curious mingling of religious devotion and medieval superstition that characterizes the people is well brought out in an easy-flowing little yarn that has a charm through the simplicity of its style and the fact that the author is clearly on familiar ground. The dry humor with which he relates his various experiences at the optimistic age of 17 makes the story well worth while.

"RETOLED FROM ST. NICHOLAS," (Century Co.)

Geography as a formal study may not enthrall many boys and girls, but when imparted through travel stories like these it comes in for a very large spontaneous interest. In this collection, various authors represent phases of life in many countries, puerilis puellique.

"DOROTHY DAINTY," by Amy Brooks. (Lathrop, Lee & Shepard.)

The latest locale of our popular little friend's multitudinous amazing experiences is on Gem Island, which you may have some trouble in finding on your map. Dorothy is as nice as ever, and so are her adventures.

"THE CAIRN OF STARS," by Francis Carlin. (Henry Holt & Co.)

HE poems collected under this highly imaginative title transport irresistibly into that realm of mind and heart wherein dwell the poetical spirits so often found among those descendants of the ancient Celtic race that occupy Ireland. These spirits, with their gift of seeing beyond the 'kitchen nook' and finding the little things and their beauty, which they bring to light for those of us with less discerning eyes, clothe their utterances in humor, pathos and joy, proffered in accents of haunting melody. Francis Carlin is one of these spirits. He conjures up brilliant images; paints in lively colors incidents that are true to life; or drifts along the enchanting borderland of mysticism.

Like Francis Ledwidge, the Gaelic poet who was lost to us in the disaster of war, he writes about simple and appealing things, and one is inclined to linger lovingly over this poetry which always represents an ideal beauty of thought, whether describing tenderly the wind's grief over a dead bird and a dead leaf, or martially the marching back of heroes out of a nation's mustered past, or perhaps just simply a bereaved child watching a star through a chimney.

"THE GATE OF FULFILLMENT," by Knowles Ridsdale. (G. P. Putnam.)

HERE we have the story of the conversion of a misanthrope and neurasthenic, by a girl whom trial and tribulation had but softened and sweetened. She applies through the mail for a position as secretary, in answer to an advertisement, inclosing her photograph and listing her qualifications.

Judge Landis to Meet Presidents Of Local Teams

New Head of Organized Baseball Will Discuss Situation Here This Afternoon.

NEW CONTRACT UNSIGNED

Federal Jurist's Right to Hold Two Positions to Be Discussed Tonight.

Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis of Chicago, who is the largest figure today on the baseball horizon, by reason of his recent selection to the post of one-man commission in charge of major league baseball, will hold an informal conversation this afternoon with President Phil Ball of the Browns and President Sam Breiden of the Cardinals. Judge Landis was here today from Chicago as a guest of the St. Louis Bar Association, members of which he is to address tonight.

No subjects of vital consequence are expected to come up at today's discussion. Phil Ball, despite a broken ankle, welcomed the chance to talk over baseball affairs with the new arbiter.

Judge Landis told reporters today that the gambling feature was the worst menace confronting baseball today, and that the efforts of major league authorities to stamp it out would be relentless.

Judge Landis recently was chosen a one-man commission as a compromise between the Lasker Plan forces and the Ban Johnson supporters, who favored the old national commission government.

Judge Landis will retain his post as United States judge along with his new position as referee between the National and American leagues in matters of conflict.

Can He Hold Two Jobs?

Judge Landis, in arranging the meeting with the local baseball men, requested that both owners bring their "playing managers" with them. But as the Browns have not yet named a successor to Burke and his Branch Rickey was out of the city, the two presidents were unable to comply with this request.

RIOT FOLLOWS REFEREE'S VERDICT OF DRAW IN CHICAGO WRESTLING GO

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—Spectators at a wrestling match between William Dementral, the "Greek Demolisher," and Jack Linley, staged a "haymarket riot" which drew scores of police to the Haymarket Theater, when Referee Johnny Meyers rendered a "draw" decision at midnight, stopping the match.

Dementral, who the first fall in 1920 and Linley had a head lock on Dementral when the referee stopped the match. Scenery box curtains, footlights and other decorations were torn down and smashed by the crowd, which clamored against the halting of a "finish" match.

Members of a burlesque chorus who had remained to watch the wrestling, barricaded themselves in their dressing rooms, as the crowds surged onto the stage kicking holes through the scenery. The few policemen present at the bout were powerless until reserves arrived and swept the rioters "out into the streets."

Defoe Stops Another Foe.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Billy Defoe of St. Paul added another victim to his rapidly growing list when he stopped Frankie Brown in the eleventh round of their bout at the Pique Sports Club last night. Defoe outclassed his adversary from the start.

Epsilon Eta Team Wins.

The Epsilon Eta Club football team scored a 13-to-0 victory over the Junior High School eleven on the former team's gridiron, yesterday afternoon. Murchison scored both touchdowns for the victors, while Soles added the goal. Gann played well for the high school outfit.

Football, Now Nearly Standardized, Would Profit by Pass Amendment

Eastern Critic Favors Haughton's Proposal to Make Blocked Throw Recoverable, as in Case of a Punt—Finds Sentiment in East Generally in Favor of Modification of Rules on Aerial Play

This is the second of a series of three dispatches by Lawrence Perry, acknowledged authority on college sport, giving his ideas of how football can be improved. His writing is based on personal observation of leading teams in all sections of the country.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Play in the football season of 1920 brought forth nothing of revolutionary character; nothing in the way of grave defects in the rules indicating any necessity for revising the structural formation of the game. The Rules Committee would err in making any radical changes. There is, however, not the slightest chance of vital revision. For the committee, together with all who follow this great sport closely, believe that after many years of experiment the game is now approaching a standardized point.

However, there is no reason why improvements which would probably tend to complete this process, should not seriously be considered, not alone by football enthusiasts but by those who are responsible for the well being of the game.

One suggestion which comes from one of the master minds of football strategy, Percy D. Haughton, relates to the forward pass. As the rules covering the overhead game now stands, the pass is very well bulwarked; so well, in fact, that for the past few years it has been felt that the system imposes an undue strain upon the defense, while at the same time it is likely to bring about scores which, basing judgment upon the relative strength of eleven involved in a game, were not justified. This hit-or-miss style of forward pass, such as Yale used against Harvard in the final juncture of the recent game at the Bowl—such as weaker teams are always throwing when pitted against stronger opponents—is referred to.

Houghton's suggestion. Mr. Haughton suggests that the throwing of a forward pass be classed with punting in which, as all know, the ball when blocked becomes common property, just as when muffed, it goes to the side recovering it. The forward pass at present does not pass out of possession of the passing side when grounded, at cost of every coach and critic with whom the writer has talked—the inevitable result would be that fewer men would be sent down the field to receive a pass. This because of the necessity of protecting the thrower, just as punters are protected in every event it is clear fewer hit-or-miss forward passes would be thrown; greater exactitude would be the price of ground gaining. If objection arises to this suggested change it will undoubtedly come from the smaller colleges whose teams under the present system have a better chance of scoring than would otherwise be the case.

Personally the writer approves of the proposed amendment, suggesting, merely that the rule be so written as to retain stipulations interfering with the receiver.

Goal-Kick Rule Satisfactory. No other changes of importance have been suggested. The rule which eliminated the necessity of punt-out after touchdowns and worked to the general satisfaction of all.

The only complaint registered by bowlers competing in the annual Middle West tournament here was brought about by something over which the officials of the association have no control. That was concerning the pins used.

Mid-West Bowlers Handicapped By Unequal Weight of Pins Used

The only complaint registered by bowlers competing in the annual Middle West tournament here was brought about by something over which the officials of the association have no control. That was concerning the pins used.

Rule No. 20 of the Mid-West Association reads as follows: "The pins used in the annual tournament shall weigh not less than three (3) pounds and not more than three pounds and six ounces." Rule 10 of the playing rules says: "Pins weighing three pounds, two ounces, or three pounds, three ounces shall have preference. Pins not to vary more than six ounces in any one set."

However, it has been impossible to follow the above law in the local tournament. The manufacturers sent pins which, according to several persons, who have seen them weighed, average 3 pounds 8 ounces and 3 pounds 9 ounces. It also has been found that there is a variation of more than six ounces in the weight of pins in the same set. In all other requirements the pins come up to measurement.

Unseasoned Wood Is Blamed. Wood, which has not been thoroughly seasoned, is ascribed as the reason for the heavy pins. According to officials, the manufacturers stated, however, that it was the best they could obtain. Maple is used in the manufacture of pins. They are furnished by the company, which manufactures all the necessities used in the game. During the rolling it has many times been remarked by various bowlers "that they never worked harder for nine-pine breaks in their life."

Time after time a bowler has hit the 1-3 pocket for what looked like a perfect strike hit, only to have one pin stand. Sweeping strikes or almost impossible, while there is practically no life to the pins. Once they fall, they are "dead," and do not roll around.

This is the thirteenth annual event of the association and in only two of the past time Atlantic Club's negro boxing program, last night, over Kid Duff of St. Louis. The bout was scheduled to go eight rounds, but was cut to six, when Bell failed to make the agreed 158 pounds.

"All St. Louis" Soccer Team to Be Re-Assembled

Eleven That Toured Sweden May Play Holiday Games Here Against League Clubs.

Efforts will be made by the St. Louis Soccer League to get the "All-St. Louis" team, which toured Sweden during the winter, together for a set of holiday attractions with the local eleven at Cardinal Field. In order to accomplish this five players from the Erie A. A. will have to be brought from the East.

The five kickers with Erie, who, according to Tom Cahill, are the real backbone of the present favorites among the Eastern eleven to reach the U. S. F. A. final, are George Tintle, goal; George Post, fullback; A. Blakey, halfback, and J. Hemmingley and D. Brown, forwards.

Another player who would have to be brought West is Harry Radican of the Robins Drydock. Radican, a St. Louis boy, came here with the Robins last season, and proved the real star of the eleven.

According to President Barker of the local circuit, the players are ready to go West for a winter, but permission would have to be obtained from their teams, who might have other important clashes to play at the time of the intended conflicts.

However, President Barker said he thought the league would be able to conclude the proposed arrangement.

Erie an "All-American" Team.

When he recently, Tom Cahill, secretary of the United States Football Association, stated that the Erie A. A. team was one of the best ever put together and had succeeded Bethlehem and the Robins as Eastern favorites. The eleven put together by the "imported" team out of the running in the early round of the U. S. F. A. cup competition.

According to Cahill, the Erie A. A. is a regularly organized club and made up of nothing but American born players. It plays its contests at the old Federal League ball park at Harrison, N. J., and has a rental of 15 per cent of the gate receipts.

Winning Teams Are Essential.

Not a few of the large universities have expensive athletic plants and more are being built every year. Huge amphitheaters of the sort cost vast sums to build and a big yearly outlay to maintain. Winning eleven are essential to income adequate to meet the overhead expense and as a consequence winning teams must be had. This is not to say that victories are required in yearly sequence, but a goodly share are necessary, particularly in the cases of institutions whose games are not of the classic variety—that is, games that do not extend well back into history.

Games around which the glow of tradition does not hang; games in brief to which alumni and football followers do not go as a matter of inherited habit.

Even where tradition is an established fact and attendance at games more or less automatic, as it were, the premium upon success has greater emphasis year by year. Thus it behooves educators and alumni who have a sense of proportion to see that the balance of power as between the essential aims of a seat of learning and the athletic functions are maintained—else there is no telling to what inglorious—not to say malodorous—future conditions may lead. This is serious, and, seriously set forth, football is getting to be a monstrous thing. As a sincere lover of the game, the writer is anxious that it be kept within proper bounds as an excellent, valuable, inspiring college sport for young men who are in college essentially for an education and not to play football.

BELL OUTPOINTS DUSTY IN 6-ROUND NEGRO BOUT

Clarence "Kid" Bell of New Orleans won the feature six-round bout of the Pastime Athletic Club's negro boxing program, last night, over Kid Duff of St. Louis. The bout was scheduled to go eight rounds, but was cut to six, when Bell failed to make the agreed 158 pounds.

In the other contests, Eugene Simms of Memphis won a technical knockout over Fast Black in the sixth round; Sheany Willis outpointed American Kid in four rounds, and Young Rollins knocked out Kid Harris in the first round.

BUFFALO BEATS CANTON FOOTBALL TEAM, 7 TO 3

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—About 5000 spectators gathered at the Polo Grounds today to witness the first professional football game seen here in many years.

In the second half Buffalo won, 7 to 3, scoring a touchdown and goal, to Canton's field goal.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA ISSUES FOOTBALL DEFI

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 4.—A challenge to any college or university football team in the United States, Middlewestern or Western preferred, to meet the University of Southern California here, next, Thanksgiving day, was issued today by Henry Bruce, graduate manager.

SUNDAY BLUE LAW.

If your face should not be long
You'll be pinched.
If you sing a merry song
You'll be pinched.
Should you be so indiscreet
As to whistle on the street,
By the copper on the beat
You'll be pinched.

If you smoke a cigarette
You'll be pinched.
If you make a friendly bet
You'll be pinched.
If you play upon the links
Or indulge in any jinx
You'll be pinched.

If you tell a funny joke
You'll be pinched.
If you say your pipe you smoke
You'll be pinched.
It will be a mortal sin
If at anything you grin,
And they'll surely run you in—
You'll be pinched.

If to church you fail to go
You'll be pinched.
If you witness any show
You'll be pinched.
If you see a game of ball
Or upon a lady call Or do anything at all,
You'll be pinched.

TOO TRUE.
However, we are all too busy figuring out the law of supply and After we have solved the intricacies of averages and see how close we will come to winning the pennant.

St. Louis Cueists Rivals for Title

Layton, Preliminary Winner, and Champion Cannexaf Both Local Products.

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—Play off of the four-cornered for third place in the preliminaries of the world's three-cushion billiard championship tournament today gave Augie Kleckhefer of Chicago, Alfredo de Oro of New York, Pierre Maupome of Milwaukee and John Daly of New York, another chance to qualify for the final, which will start Tuesday.

The title of Bob Cannexaf will be challenged by Johnny Layton of St. Louis, who finished first in the preliminaries, and Clarence Jackson of Kansas City, who placed second and the survivor of the playoff for third. Cannexaf, the title-holder is, like Layton, a St. Louis product.

Kleckhefer meets Daly this afternoon at 2 p. m. and de Oro clashes with Maupome at 2:30 p. m. One night game will be played, with de Oro, if he wins, meeting the loser of the first game, while if he is beaten the Cuban will play the winner of the opening match.

Layton receives $1000 and Jackson $800 for finishing first and second respectively. Third place will pay the winner $700. Fourth, $600; fifth, $400, and sixth, $200.

CAPT. BOB ROPER GIVES SAMSON A TRIMMING

BALTIMORE, Md., Dec. 4.—Capt. Bob Roper of Chicago won his bout with K. O. Samson in the first round here last night. Samson was floored for the count of nine, a minute after the fight had begun. On the second knockdown he was on his feet at the count of nine, but his seconds tossed the towel into the ring.

Boxers to Be Numbered.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—All contestants in the New York State boxing championships, to be conducted under the auspices of the Amateur Athletic Union next month, will be numbered, according to Secretary Fred Ruben. This innovation will serve to make the bout more interesting to the spectators, he said.

Five-Man Teams Finish Mid-West Bowling, Tonight

St. Louisan Rolls Into Fourth Place in the All-Events With 1752 Total.

The five-man competition of the Middle West bowling tournament will be completed tonight, when pin-poppers from seven states take the alleys at 5 p. m. and roll in three shifts until midnight.

The first set of bowlers will start at 5 p. m.; another shift of nine teams will start at 7:30 o'clock; and the last squads to strive for positions will start rolling at 9:30. St. Louis quintets have completed their efforts and whatever transpires from now to the end of the tournament in the team play will be of indirect interest to local followers.

The local bowlers will have their last chance at the two-man and individual prizes today. The doubles teams started bowling at 10:30 o'clock this morning and will continue through the afternoon. The singles event is scheduled to be started shortly after noon.

The feature of yesterday's competition was the taking of fourth place in the all-events by Ed Rolfe, a local bowler. Rolfe completed his rolling for a 1752 total. This includes 592 in the five-man event, 675 in doubles and 585 in singles.

Tonight's schedule follows:
5 o'clock: Sonias Tailors, Fremont, Neb.; Omaha Allies, Omaha; Saratoga, Peoria; Schroma, Rockford, Ill.; Fort Dodge Association, Fort Dodge, Ia.; Leath, Dubuque, Ia.; Mitchell Tailors, Port Huron, Mich.; Maxwell, Belleville.

7:15 o'clock: Parrell & Kart, Chicago; Goldammer Bros., Chicago; Huns Bakers, Milwaukee; Athletic Club, St. Paul; Harry Feichtingers, Minneapolis; B. F. Nelson, Minneapolis; North East Feed Mills, Minneapolis; Central Alleys, Minneapolis.

9:30 o'clock: Lundin Bros., Highland, Ill.; Highland Stars, Highland, Ill.; Indiana, Indianapolis; Universal, Indianapolis; Central Alleys, Indianapolis; Central Alleys, Indianapolis; Bill Jones, Chicago; Diamond Crown, Chicago.

REPORT THAT HENDRIX AND HERZOG WOULD BE DROPPED, UNCONFIRMED

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—Reports that waivers had been asked on Claude Hendrix, pitcher, and Charles (Buck) Herzog, second baseman of the Chicago National League team, were current last night. President William Veck of the Chicago club refused to confirm or deny the truth of the reports.

Mr. Veck refused to reply to a question as to whether Hendrix and Herzog might be released in the same manner as Joe Gedeck of the St. Louis American League Club, whose unconditional release was announced shortly after he had testified before the grand jury that he had knowledge of the deal alleged to have been made by Chicago White Sox players to throw games in the 1919 world series.

Herzog, according to his own testimony before the local grand jury, was offered money to throw games in the National League. He was a member of the New York Giants. He maintained his innocence when testifying.

Hendrix was scheduled to pitch a game for the Chicago club against the Philadelphia Nationals, but Alexander was sent in at the last moment after Mr. Veck had received several telegrams notifying him that the game had been "fixed" for Philadelphia to win and that thousands of dollars were being bet in several cities.

SUNDAY BASEBALL FOR PROFIT ATTACKED BY NEW YORK CIVIC BODY

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—A call upon "all true Americans in the State of New York" to oppose the repeal of those laws, signed by Gov. Smith, which gave immensely valuable franchises to the Sunday baseball and Sunday motion picture businesses, was made yesterday by the New York Civic League's committee appointed to recommend militant measures against "the commercial interests that are desecrating the Sabbath."

"We are not asking for laws to prohibit amateur Sunday baseball or Sunday motion pictures where no admission fee is charged," said the statement. It advocated prohibition of "all Sunday sports and amusements conducted as a business and for profit."

KID NICHOLS, FORMER LEADER OF CARDS, HERE AS A MOVIE MAGNATE

Charles "Kid" Nichols, widely known in major league circles in the early years of this century as pitcher for the Boston club and later as manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, was a visitor in the city yesterday. Nichols is now in the motion picture business and is the owner of the film, "A Child for Sale," now showing at the Strand movie house. Nichols was not only a master of the overhand delivery, in his day, but was one of the best hitting pitchers of his time, being consistently in the .300 class.

Charley White to Box Here Dec. 13

Chicago Fighter Accepts Offer to Meet Winner of Lawler-Shannon Match.

Charley White, once a leading contender for the lightweight ring championship, wired the officials of the National Sporting Club yesterday that he would accept conditions for a match with the winner of the Jack Lawler-Eddie Shannon fight which takes place at the Army, Monday. White was to have fought the winner of the Shannon-Cole bout, but Shannon injured his hand and wasn't ready to meet White at that time.

Shannon worked-out yesterday at the Business Men's gymnasium with Eddie Taylor and satisfied himself that he fit to meet anybody. Shannon was given a nice exercise gallop by the improving Eddie Taylor. The day before, Shannon worked out with Harry Kabakoff and an interesting result resulted, with the ringside view favoring Shannon.

Cook's gymnasium was thronged with workers yesterday, besides Shannon and Taylor being Peeewe Kaiser, who is slated for a match at the South Broadway; Kabakoff, who boxes Andy Chaney, Dec. 16; Willie Colona, Kid Bell, and many others.

Billy Cole, who will be given a date at the Coliseum Dec. 30, it is stated, was not in boxing clothes, but looked on.

Each of the matches will be at 24 games, with total pins to count. The two-man match is for a $400 purse in the National League of Bowling for $200. The competitions will be rolled in three parts, opening in St. Louis, then Chicago, and being completed in Milwaukee.

The two-man affair will be started on the Washington alleys, next Saturday night at 8:15 p. m. The individual contests start at the same time the following evening.

PETERSON MAKES 1000 POINTS AT BILLIARDS, SETTING SPEED MARK

Charles Peterson, St. Louis' premier professional billiardist and champion fancy shot maker of the country, yesterday set a new world's record for speed counting. In a telegram to the Post-Dispatch Peterson stated that he had made 1000 points in five minutes and one second, in an effort to beat his former record of five minutes and five seconds.

Peterson has been named to referee the matches to be played in the near future for the national ball-line billiard championship.

BOSTON COLLEGE TAKES LEAD OVER HOLY CROSS

BOSTON, Dec. 4.—Boston College football team, which for two successive seasons has beaten the Yale University team, today gave an exhibition of its football power when it scored eight points in the first half and held the enemy scoreless.

Boston was just as good defensively, in the third period, and the score was still 8-0 when the last 15-minute period was started.

8-YEAR-OLD BOY KILLED BY AUTO IN FRONT OF HOME

Lyle Cox Struck as He Runs
From Alley West of Coliseum by Machine Driven by Harry Lasky.

Lyle Cox, 8-year-old son of Paul Cox, of 2620 Washington avenue, was almost instantly killed yesterday at 5 p. m. in front of his home by an automobile being driven east in Washington avenue by Henry Lasky.

Lyle, with companions, ran out from an alley which is just west of the Coliseum, Lyle passing in front of an automobile parked just west of the alley into the path of Lasky's machine. His skull was fractured.

The boy's death was the 105th motor vehicle fatality in the city since last Jan. 1, compared with 88 for the same period of 1919.

Two Children and Five Others Hurt in Motor Accidents.

Two children and five grown persons were injured in automobile accidents yesterday.

Abraham Lehr, 12, son of Morris Lehr of 5578 A. Easton avenue, was struck in front of 5500 Easton avenue by an automobile driven by Edward Carroll, 1731 North Prairie avenue, suffering concussion of the brain and scalp wounds.

Rose Burr, 8, daughter of Edwin Burr, 4629 Washington boulevard, suffered scalp wounds and a sprained hip, when struck on Olive street near Walton avenue by an automobile driven by Clayton R. Lupton of 4449 Olive street. She had stepped backward from the sidewalk on the north side of Olive street into the street.

Man's Leg Fractured.

Eugene Connolly, 45, of 5118 Minerva avenue, suffered a fracture of his left leg and scalp wounds, when struck as he was crossing from the north to the south side of Park boulevard near Lindell walk by an automobile driven by Samuel Moonshine, 5206 Page boulevard, an electrician, who was going west in Page.

Crosby A. Cochran, 22, who resides on the Lackland road in St. Louis County, was knocked from his motorcycle at Arlington and Minerva avenues by an automobile driven by Charles A. Nickamp, 2115 Hord avenue, St. Louis County, suffering concussion of the brain and probably a fracture of his skull.

James M. Sharon, 64, of 1302 Howard street, suffered slight injuries as he was crossing from the east to the west side of Sixteenth street at Cass avenue, when struck by an automobile driven by Otto Schultz of 2120 North Thirteenth street.

Roy Kleinkemper, 21, of 1851 Lulu avenue, St. Louis County, turned his motorcycle sharply at Bartner and Goodfellow avenues to avoid a collision with a truck. The motorcycle overturned upon Kleinkemper, injuring him internally.

Auto Upsets in Street.

John C. Heaman Jr., 20, of 7170 Washington boulevard, turned his automobile as he was passing 4620 Delmar boulevard to avoid hitting a taxicab. The automobile overturned, throwing Heaman, Frank W. Baldy, 27, of 4112 Westminster place, a broker, and two others into the street. Baldy was cut over the right eye and in the back of his head. The others were not injured.

$10,000 PAYROLL MONEY IS STOLEN IN OFFICE HOLDUP

Five Masked Men Escape
After Robbing Fur Firm of Which Police Commissioner Fouke Is President.

Five robbers masked with blue polka dot handkerchiefs and carrying revolvers, at 5:40 p. m. yesterday forced a chauffeur and four clerks to lie face downward on the floor and stole $10,000 of payroll money at the office of the Gibbins & Lohn Dressing and Dyeing Co., 1328 South King's highway, whose president is Philip B. Fouke, a member of the Board of Police Commissioners. The robbers escaped in an automobile.

The company is a subsidiary of the Funsten Commission Co. and the International Fur Exchange, of both of which Fouke is also president. It has about 150 employees and its principal business is the dressing and dyeing of sealskins, for the United States Government. After the robbery President Fouke said the payroll money was insured.

Plant Somewhat Isolated.

The company's plant is in a somewhat isolated location east of the King's Highway viaduct. Between it and the south end of the viaduct at McRee avenue there is a network of railroad tracks across which the robbers drove when getting away.

When the robbers approached the plant from Manchester avenue at the north end of the viaduct or from McRee avenue at the south end is not known. The first that was seen of them by anyone at the plant was when they confronted Simon Bollman, of 4708 Lewis place, a chauffeur for the company, as he walked down the steps from the company's office, which is on the second floor.

Five revolvers were thrust at Bollman and the leader of the robber gang, described by Bollman as being red-haired and wearing a gray cap, said to him: "You keep still and go upstairs with us." He obeyed and was closely followed by the robbers. When they arrived at the office the red-haired leader said to Bollman: "Lie down there in the middle of the floor and keep your head down."

Clerks Lie on Floor.

Clerks in the office were James Monahan, 4865 Greer avenue; Ray Barham, 2751 Lafayette avenue; P. J. Cahill, 223 South Newstead avenue and A. J. Lyons, 4207 Castleman avenue. They obeyed an order to lie down beside Bollman.

The payroll money in individual envelopes, ready for distribution to the employees, who were to have been paid off at 6 p. m.

Though obeying the command to lie on the floor some of the clerks "peeped" and later they told police-men they saw the red-haired man go back to the table and put the envelopes in some sort of container. They think this was a box which he picked up in the office, but they are not certain on this point.

After taking the money the red-haired man said to his companions: "I've got it all. Beat it out of here." The other robbers went down the stairs. The red-haired man backed out and stopped at the door to say: "You fellows stay there five minutes. If you don't, somebody will get shot."

Drive Away Over Tracks.

The clerks heard the noise of an automobile getting under way. Ignoring the command to remain prostrate for five minutes, they went to windows overlooking the railroad yards and saw a machine with five men in it driving across the railroad tracks toward the south end of the viaduct.

The police say that in a general way the red-haired leader of the robbers answers the description of one of two men who held up and robbed the treasurer of the Grand Opera House at 513 Market street last Sunday night and escaped with about $5000.

WOMAN, 70, SERIOUSLY HURT WHEN HIT BY STREET CAR

Mrs. Mary Schertz, Struck by Maryland Car at Grand and Olive, Suffers Brain Concussion.

Mrs. Mary Schertz, 70 years old, a widow, living at the Beers Hotel, Grand avenue and Olive street, was struck by an eastbound Olive-Maryland car and seriously injured at 8:30 last night, as she was crossing from the north to south side of Olive street, about 15 feet west of the regular crossing.

She was carried into the hotel. Physicians found she had suffered concussion of the brain, injuries to the back and scalp wounds in the accident.

Tuesday night Bernard Westermann, 78 years old, of 1818 Wagoner place, was struck by a westbound Olive car about 50 feet west of the Grand avenue crossing, and died a short time later at the city hospital.

MRS. F. B. PRICE CANDIDATE FOR BOARD OF EDUCATION

Mrs. Fannie Bonner Price, president of the Woman's Chamber of Commerce, yesterday announced she intended to become a candidate for membership on the Board of Education at the April election. She is a Republican.

Mrs. Price said that while she was not formally announcing her candidacy, she had been urged by a number of his friends to seek the place, and that if she was elected she would be glad to accept.

The Price of Diamonds Is Controlled

THE Diamond Syndicate releases each year a little smaller quantity than the world will buy, thus insuring stability of prices for Diamonds. For the past fifteen years these prices, however, have steadily increased, as have also the difficulties in mining.

As far as can be determined by expert investigators there is little likelihood of Diamonds ever depreciating in value. The public may therefore buy Diamonds in the belief that, in every probability, they will always be worth the price paid, if not more.

A Diamond is undoubtedly the most permanent gift in beauty and value that can be chosen.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

West End Not Essential.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
May I have space enough to give one solution of the housing problem and the high-rent bugaboo—a very real one to most of us?
For five years I have lived in the West End. Our friends for the most part lived there and it seemed to us that the West End spelled the residence district of St. Louis. Gradually the rents climbed and we—with the rest of the climbers perhaps—continued to meet the advances groaning and sometimes I fear cursing beneath the load but always eventually meeting the increase.
Time came for another increase and then one day it occurred to my wife and I that perhaps there were other residence districts in this great, big city.
Shuddering a bit at the thought of forsaking the West End, we went house seeking. And we found what we were seeking. Out in North St. Louis, in a section as pretty and as attractive as any near Forest Park, we found the ideal apartment for our needs, four rooms, sun parlor and bath. And for this ideal apartment we found that we would have to pay just one-half what we paid for a cliff dwellers' efficiency apartment in the West End.

Has it ever occurred to you that if some of us were to drop the four-flushing, the social climbing, the desire to hang on to the ragged edge of so-called aristocracy, that perhaps many more of us might find apartments in sections other than the West End, not only thus aiding in the development of the city, but satisfying our own needs. We are satisfied now that we have spent much money and more time in worrying during the past five years merely because we could not rid ourselves of the obsession that all that was good in St. Louis existed in that district called the West End.
ONE WHO HAS LEARNED.

A North St. Louisian Pleads.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
"Bend Amendment Adopted Held to Apply to St. Louis," the papers say.
Now, why not give the children of O'Fallon Park district a playground?
We have absolutely nothing of this kind out this way.
Why not annex some of the vacant property on the north side of the park, which is now nothing but waste and shrubbery, but could be beautifully utilized as a park for children, and a splendid addition to the park proper, as the Taylor car run by this city, which surely would make a splendid finish for O'Fallon Park?
NORTH ST. LOUISIAN.

Begin at the Beginning.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
There are editors in galore, our Tenth Ward editors fulminate and their air is full of remedies to be applied by the police, prosecuting attorneys and judges for holdups, murders, bank robberies and all the wave of crime that has become associated so closely with the speeding automobiles which enable the criminals to make their getaway so easily.
But are not all these plans and efforts like those of a person essaying to master a science or craft by beginning at the product end and experimenting backward, as amateurs often do, with curious results?

Do we not daily read of the universal revolver, ever handy, in the possession not only of the criminal, but also of the ostensibly peaceful citizen? And what prevents the latter from suddenly losing his temper, with or without raisin mash, and avenging some fancied affront? When the police of England succeed in preserving order and law, only the clubs not being allowed to carry a pistol, with the result that shootings and murders there are but a small fraction of those in America, it tells the tale: Their people do not go armed. In this country the sale of revolvers is perfectly free and encouraged by a law that makes the lawbreaker and a junk shop. The laws against carrying deadly weapons are but slacks enforced.

The sale of the instruments of murder should be absolutely forbidden, or so severely restricted as to be a true preventive in actual effect, and the practice of carrying concealed weapons far more strictly dealt with. Reduce the quantity of the tools of crime. Why not begin at the beginning? H. B. SCAMMELL.

Street Railway Extension Needed.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
Street car service in the North End would be greatly improved if the Grand avenue line was extended to connect with the Broadway line and also if this was done the United Railways would get many 7 cent fares from the improved service.
There are more people employed in the North End along Broadway than in any part of St. Louis and night and morning they must go to Taylor avenue to transfer if they live west of Broadway and north of Cass avenue.

The Public Service Commission has the power to regulate fares and certainly has something to say about the service to be given passengers and can no doubt order this connection made.
Anyone can see what present conditions are at Broadway and Taylor from 5 p. m. to 7 p. m.
Why not make St. Louis a good town for the working man.
JOHN SMITH.

THE GAS COMPANY'S COAL CONTRACT

Should the Missouri Public Service Commission grant the Laclede Gas Light Co.'s application for an increase in rates, a heavy tax would be imposed on the people of St. Louis for the benefit of the Consolidation Coal Co. of Baltimore.

The Laclede Gas Light Co.'s contract with the Consolidation Coal Co. is a subject for investigation by the Public Service Commission. The Post-Dispatch has already conducted an investigation through a reporter whose inquiries among coal men at Cincinnati has resulted in interesting findings. By this contract, made on Nov. 12, when a general price recession had commenced, the Laclede company agreed to pay $2.45 a ton more in 1921 than it has paid this year and $3.30 more than the price during the six-year period from 1914 to 1920.

Coal dealers in Cincinnati were unanimous in declaring that the Consolidation Coal Co. had made a most desirable contract, especially under the circumstances of a falling market. One dealer showed the reporter a letter which quoted a price of $4.50 a ton—50 cents less than the Laclede contract—for any quantity of the same quality of coal. There was reluctance on the part of the dealers to say just what would be a fair price in a contract calling for 600,000 tons of coal, but, quoting the data and practice of the Fuel Commission during the war, it seemed that a price of $2.55 a ton would not have been inequitable.

It will probably be remembered, too, that the wartime Fuel Commission, under the chairmanship of Dr. Garfield, was believed to be rather generous to the coal companies. For purposes of demonstration, however, we may, theoretically, outdo the Fuel Commission, by allowing the Consolidation Coal Co., say, $3 a ton in its contract with the Laclede company. At that figure, unless successful coal dealers are mistaken, the Consolidation Coal Co. would have a very profitable contract, while the Laclede company's savings on its consumption of 600,000 tons, would amount to $1,200,000. That is a considerable saving; enough, perhaps, to enable the Laclede company to get along fairly well without increasing the light bills of the people of St. Louis.

From all the information at hand the only conclusion possible is that the Laclede company made a poor contract. Somebody blundered. But should the people of St. Louis be obliged to pay for the business incompetence of the Laclede Gas Light Co.?

That is the question for the Public Service Commission to answer. The commission, too, should painstakingly inform itself of all the facts before it attempts the answer.

ARTICLE X OFFICIALLY CONSTRUED.

The admission of Austria into the League of Nations has brought out what may be regarded as an official interpretation of the much discussed Article X. That article, it is explained, does not declare the territorial status of the nations as fixed by the Versailles treaty to be unchangeable; it simply guarantees such territorial integrity and political independence as against outside aggression.

Such construction, of course, is the only interpretation compatible with common sense and consistent with the self-determination provision of the covenant, as well as with the inevitable mutations of all history. The efforts of our politicians to read into Article X a flat of bizarre pretentiousness and sinister obligations are well understood here as mere political tactics. The official repudiation of such misconstructions is unnecessary, though it is well enough that such repudiation be entered in the record.

If justice of the limping feet seems a good way behind a big flock of local stick-up men, burglars and murderers, let us remember the comparative ease with which she overtook the blind man who was triumphantly convicted and instantly fined $50 for begging on the streets.

A BANK PORTER'S ADVENTURE.

A negro porter, while acting as a trusted messenger for a bank, has had an extraordinary experience. It appears from the chronicles that, while custodian of $3400 in silver, he adventured into a crap game, which swallowed up 500 of the $3400 dollars in one gulp, so to speak. At that point the trusted messenger withdrew from the arena of chance. A bit of Arabian flavor attaches to the affair in respect of a generous, gallant gift by which some more of the money disappeared, but that is merely incidental. It is the reported withdrawal from the crap game, while yet equipped (however dubiously) to finance further essays with fortune, that seems incredible.

There are estimable persons who will be shocked to learn that this messenger, who betrayed a trust by weakly yielding to a desire for swift, unworthy gain, has also displayed the stuff of martyrs. The trouble with such estimable persons is, they have never shot craps. If they had ever come within the radius of the fascination appertaining to a pair of dice, had known the spell of the weird incantations, had beheld the expedition with which wealth accumulates, or the unbelievable celerity with which it vanishes—if, in a word, they had ever shot craps, the didactic judgment already rendered would be accepted as delivered.

It is far from our intention to palliate the recreancy of this messenger. On the contrary, his untrustworthiness is to be censured and justice demands

STANDARDIZED CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTIONS.
Twenty-six park laborers contributed $2.25 each, or one day's pay, to the campaign funds of the Republican City Committee. The domestic demands on some of these men must have been less than on others. Why, however, did all contribute exactly $2.25? Were the Republican convictions of the entire 26 so standardized as to appeal to the pockets of one with precisely the same force as to the pockets of all the others? Why did not a merely average G. O. P. enthusiasm impel some to give only $3 and an excess of G. O. P. enthusiasm impel others to give at least as much as $3.50?

Equally remarkable is the case of 12 janitresses at park shelters. On the duty of the citizen to support his political principles according to his means, the minds of the entire 12 worked with such beautiful uniformity that each contributed spontaneously $4 to the campaign fund. Contributions attuned just as finely to the size of the salaries received were given by other park employees.

Assessments on city employees for political purposes are strictly forbidden by the charter. But if these curiously standardized contributions are not explained by some plan of collection in clear violation of the charter, what does explain it? The prohibition serves excellent purposes and was designed to be obeyed, not ignored and evaded. As the primary returns, through their inconsistencies presented internal evidence of the irregularities which the grand jury has now exposed in detail, so these lists of campaign contributions present internal evidence of assessments on the basis of salary.

Doubtless attempts will be made to account for it with the old line of bunk in which politicians deal in such cases. This might, however, be a good time to find out if the charter provision has any teeth.

Imports of diamonds, pearls and furs in September amounted to $6,500,000, or about a third of the September volume of last year. Do we need a revival of the orgy of extravagance?

CONGRESS AND THE BLUE LAWS.

Declarations by prominent members of Congress that they are not interested at all in the blue-law Sunday program for the District of Columbia, and that the proposal will not even be considered, ought to amuse the Rev. Mr. Dinwiddle of Anti-Saloon League celebrity, who is one of the leaders in the movement.

The Rev. Mr. Dinwiddle has seen a whole lot of Congress in the last 10 years. He is familiar with its superior, supercilious moods. He has seen it manifest the same indifference to the vagaries of soulful reformers it is displaying in this instance. He knows what it is to cool his heels in the ante-room of greatness, to be denied a hearing, to receive only a scant, grudging minute. And he has seen that attitude change. He has seen the proud humbled, seen the powerful get down from the seats of the mighty and become meekly and respectfully obedient, anxious to please, carrying out orders with the alacrity of toadying subordinates.

Knowing, as he does, the malleable character of Congress, the Rev. Mr. Dinwiddle should smilingly watch this outburst of independence on the part of our statesmen, assess it as the caprice of an inebriate moment, which will presently pass, leaving our lawmakers as tractable as trained seals.

The blue-law Sunday, first to be installed in the District of Columbia and later to be spread across the whole nation, proposes to make of Sunday a thoroughly unhappy, do-nothing, innocuous day. All wheels are to be stopped, including facilities upon whose more or less continuous operation the ordinary comforts of life depend. The Sunday newspaper is to be abolished. The wholesome, outdoor games, in whose increasing variety and popularity the workaday world is finding health, strength, amusement and recreation, are to be proscribed. Compulsory church attendance is not included in the prospectus yet, but with that exception the requirements and inhibitions are such as to thrill the soul of the most intolerant zealot.

The blue-law Sunday may seem a grotesque throwback, but it is the logical next step in the destruction of our constitutional rights, in which direction we have already proceeded perilously far. The Dinwiddles, perhaps, are trespassing beyond the limits of our endurance, but we should not censure them; they are but following their predestined course. It is our statesmen at Washington whom we should censure for their craven surrender to the protagonists of intolerance, whose passion for conquest is as insatiable as that of any other power-drunk tyrant.

HOW the world gets on! Something like 2500 years ago a man named Pericles rose to speak at the funeral of the Athenians who had fallen in the Samian War.

He told us in that address something about the city of Athens and about the things of which it boasted, of its hopes and its aspirations. He said among other things that in Athens, where they had striven to have a democracy, they did not spy upon one another!

We know you gasped when you read that. Who would? Twenty-five hundred years after Pericles we are so busy spying upon one another in the United States that we pretty much all feel ourselves being watched.

We, too, have striven to have a democracy. Doubtless if one could wake Pericles in his grave and tell him that after 2,500 years we cannot boast, as he could, that we do not spy upon one another, he would not believe it. He would probably say we were spoofing.

Yet we have a spying squad in the St. Louis Police Department, the business of which is to spy and get all of us spying. Spying has become the unpopular pastime of our country.

There are spies everywhere, and we haven't got started yet putting them on. They will shortly be as thick as leaves in Vallambrosa. You may not know that saying, but take it from us that is pretty thick.

What are we going to do about it? Can you have a democracy and still have everybody spying upon everybody else? Pericles knew better than that.

He said they did not spy upon one another in Athens because he wanted his audience to understand that they really were getting to be quite democratic in Athens.

That was the proof of it. He knew that. He also knew that everybody else knew it. It was the point of resistance of the greatest speech made in history. It was the sockdolager with which he vanquished doubts, if any, that Athens was becoming a democracy.

Let us suppose that we had a similar occasion in St. Louis. Or say any other American city. Would someone care to get up and say: "We have a democracy. We are all spying upon one another."

No, dear reader. Nobody would care to say that. It would be too preposterous. Yet here we are 2500 years after the inventors of democracy, those self-same Greeks! Haven't we got on, though? Wouldn't they be gratified if they could know about it?

The league says it does not guarantee territorial integrity except from external aggression. That was what the President said. He did his utmost to dissuade us from the Senate view that the article guaranteed every boundary of the status quo from any sort of aggression, either in or out. We would not be dissuaded. The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publicists, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

THE HOME BREW.

From the Philadelphia Bulletin.
A SECTION of the Volstead act, passed for the enforcement of the prohibition amendment, declares it unlawful "to advertise, manufacture, sell or possess for sale any utensil, contrivance, machine, preparation, compound, tablet, substance, formula, direction or recipe, advertised, designed or intended for use in the unlawful manufacture of intoxicating liquor." But it is a long reach from the spirit of that section of the statute to the announced purpose of the Federal Prohibition Commissioner to prevent the sale of hops and malt, except to registered manufacturers, and it is by no means likely that the "interpretation" of an administrative official will be the last word on the subject. Will raisins and rye, cornmeal and what not among the ingredients which are used in the multitudinous formulas for "hooch" also be placed upon the prohibition index? The zeal of the crusaders is likely to contribute to their undoing. There is quite enough to engage their attention in removing the grosser evils of the liquor traffic which centered around the bar-room. An invasion of the citizen's "castle" is likely to provoke a determined challenge in the courts of law, already indicated by various decisions, including the recent restraining decree of the Supreme Court.

COLBY AND SOUTH AMERICA.

From the Evansville Courier.
PRESIDENT WILSON sends Secretary of State Colby to South America. That means much or little as one considers the vital effect the friendship or enmity of the southern republics will have upon the foreign policy of the United States. The tremendous weight that the ABC States, especially the Argentine and Brazil, can exert upon the chancelleries of the greater European Powers cannot be overestimated. The countries of the south have a great deal of everything that Europe needs in the way of food, oil, clothing, products and minerals. Besides, there is to their credit a vast potential military force and a formidable naval unit. No procedure can be better conceived to insure their sympathetic co-operation with the United States than this personal visit of the Secretary of State, the official that corresponds, in their minds, with the Prime Minister of European Powers. Secretary Colby will have a great chance to make Brazil and the Argentine firmer allies of the United States.

GERMANY AND BRITAIN.

From Current Opinion.
THE head of the foreign office in Berlin—Doctor Simons—suggests the possibility of a special understanding between Germany and Great Britain. Not long ago he was telling the reichstag that Russia was the friend. Next he was found dwelling with emphasis upon the neutrality of Germany—she was looking neither to the east nor to the west for allies. Now he is making up to England. Why all this shifting of position? The answer is to be found in the struggle at Berlin between the easterners and the westerners. The easterners always insist that Russia is the one power left in the world for a ruined Germany to ride with. They had things their own way until the development of a discord in the Anglo-French harmony. The westerners are now in the ascendant and Doctor Simons is talking of a cordial understanding with England. Everything, as the Wilhelmstrasse now sees the international situation, indicates a new departure with England and Germany reconciled. Prince Max of Baden, perhaps the most distinguished and most influential Liberal in Germany, works night and day to influence the German mind favorably to the "western" conception of a true foreign policy. The "Hymn of Hate" is to be rewritten and transformed into a love lyric. Future assurances of Dr. Simons are awaited with interest.

The Stockbroker's Wife

BEING PART TWO OF "COINCIDENCE"

By J. Storer Clouston

(Copyright, 1920.)

This description of Mr. T. Carrington, private detective (or "inquiry agent," as he preferred to call himself), appeared in a tale entitled "Simon," and is culled from that work with its author's permission: "He was a young man, apparently a little over 30, above middle height; with a round, ingenuous, very agreeable face, smooth, fair hair, a little, neatly trimmed mustache, and a monocle that lent just the necessary touch of distinction to what might otherwise have been a too good-humored physiognomy." The stories which are appearing every Saturday in the Post-Dispatch were for the most part told by Mr. Carrington himself over a smoking-room fire.

THIS is the fourth of a series of remarkable detective stories now running in the Post-Dispatch. The series describes some of the many events in the professional career of a private "inquiry agent." "Coincidence" is being published in three parts, today's installment being the second. The third will be published on this page next Wednesday.

CARRINGTON lit a fresh cigarette and began the second part of his story. "Wickley left my office only a little before my usual lunch hour, and I sat on over my fire for some time, thinking—but not seeing a ray of light. That made me rather late in getting back after lunch, and when I came in my clerk handed me a card and told me a gentleman was waiting in my room. On the card I read the name, 'Mr. A. D. Spencer.'

"When I glanced up from it and caught my clerk's eye, I could see that he evidently thought I had done myself a little too well at lunch. I suppose I had been standing for the whole of five minutes gazing at that card. The appearance of Mr. Spencer immediately on top of Mr. Wickley seemed a thing hardly in the course of nature. I began to wonder whether there was some sort of a conspiracy between the two men. I tried to see in advance what line this man Spencer was going to take. And then I recovered my wits and walked into my room.

"I found a heavy-looking man of rather above middle height, clean-shaven, with a blue chin, baggy eyes, and very black hair. He had the skin of a man who, as Wickley said, did himself a little too well, and I could also quite believe that he could be a sulky, ill-tempered devil if things went wrong.

"We didn't exactly meet last night, Mr. Carrington," he began, and there was quite a dash of geniality about the man when he made the effort, "but I was at the Devonset dinner and heard you speak. I also came across an old acquaintance there. Meeting him set me worrying about an old problem, and seeing you put it into my head to come and consult you in the matter."

"And then I realized that there was no conspiracy at all, nor even any very extraordinary coincidence, but, as I told you at the start, just a series of quite natural events that had produced this startling result. My second thought was, 'What a bit of luck! The solution to the insoluble problem walks into my office!' However, you'll see how far out I was there.

"Of course, you'll understand that this is strictly confidential," said he.

"Naturally," I said, and I noted that though he was evidently keen on secrecy, he didn't show the same extreme anxiety as Wickley.

"Well," he said, "I'll begin my story 11 years back. Or perhaps I should first mention that some years before that I had purchased an estate in Devonset. I'm a stockbroker, by the way; Spencer, Spencer & Luderham is my firm, and I'm the senior partner. Eleven years ago an old fellow in the neighborhood called Wickley died and his nephew came into the property and settled down next door to me. By next door I mean rather under a couple of miles away; but we had no other neighbors—of that class, I mean—within six or seven miles, and we didn't know them, either. Consequently, Wickley and I saw a lot of one another and became very friendly."

"What sort of a fellow was he?" I inquired, with my most truth-seeking expression.

"I wish you had noticed him at the dinner last night," said he, "and you'd have understood better what kind of a proposition he was. A reddish-haired, heavy-chinned sort of fellow, with queer eyes, and the word 'past' stamped all over him."

"What do you mean, exactly?"

"Well, I mean that he had a past, and I soon began to guess as much from his very appearance and manner, though at first I only felt vaguely that there was something unusual about him. I may mention that he isn't the kind of person one would naturally suspect of a shady record; for the

"This speech naturally didn't prejudice me much in favor of Mr. Spencer. Little though he realized it, he was making me look at things more and more from Wickley's point of view—had that though Mr. W. may have been, and respectable as Mr. S. no doubt was.

"I am coming to a very painful part of my story now, Mr. Carrington," he continued. "In fact, it's so infernally unpleasant that it has kept me from telling the facts to a living soul up to this moment. I had a wife—in fact, she's legally my wife still—and I was very fond of her. I can assure you on that point—I was desperately fond

"I saw it a lot clearer than he had any notion of. This, of course, accounted for Wickley's first mystery—the sudden hatred of Spencer for his neighbor.

"There could be no doubt about it," said he. "He was the only man in the neighborhood of our own position in life whom we knew in the very least intimately. And he lived inside of two miles of us. Six miles away there was a fat fellow of 50, with a wife and large family—a dull bore of a fellow. Seven miles away were two maiden ladies. Nine miles away was an invalid of 70. Those were the only alternatives, and we scarcely wrote that letter to Wickley from my London office, and then the sudden thought struck me that I would come straight home myself. He wouldn't expect me, seeing the address on the letter, and he would probably see my wife at once about it. That's how I argued. When I got home my wife was out, nobody knew where. My suspicions became a practical certainty. I took my gun and I set out in the direction of his house. I'm telling you everything quite candidly, Mr. Carrington. I was just approaching the boundary of the two properties when I saw him coming towards me, as I thought. I slipped behind a tree and watched low. And now he was lying murdered, and I had been seen leaving my house with a gun, and probably had been seen going in that very direction! Also, I knew in my heart I had meant to kill him. Lord, what a shock I got! You may think me a fool to have felt like that."

"I don't, in the very least," I assured him in all sincerity. "Well, that's how I did feel. I may add, as some excuse for my next performance, that this trouble had been leading me to drink a bit too much, and my nerve wasn't at its best. Anyhow, when I got home I didn't wait in the house longer than to order the car; and then, as a finishing touch, the chauffeur couldn't be found, and so I couldn't get to the station in time to catch the last train that evening! I had hired from the station when I arrived, so as to give no warning of my coming, but the car had gone back, and there I was, landed. However, I didn't wait in my house—I simply couldn't do it. I tramped off to a little local pub, slept the night there, and went back to town in the morning. And now comes a bit of the story that you probably won't believe, Mr. Carrington."

"I'll believe everything you tell me," I said. "I had a room at the Hotel Metropole at that time. On the same afternoon, soon after I had got back to London, I was sitting in the hall with a bundle of evening papers, looking for some news of Wickley's murder, when, what do you think? Wickley himself stepped out of the lift and walked across the hall, under my nose!"

"He looked at me expectantly, and I tried not to seem dumbfounded. I must have succeeded pretty well, for he seemed quite satisfied.

"It is absolute gospel truth," he said. "Just as he was passing he spotted me, and do you know, the extraordinary thing was that all signs of enmity seemed to have left the man! As for me, I was so thankful to see him alive I could have embraced him. We exchanged a few ordinary remarks, in a perfectly friendly way, and then he walked out of the hotel. I haven't seen him from that moment till last night at the dinner, and it was meeting him again that tuned me up to doing what, of course, I always should have done. I want this mystery cleared up, Mr. Carrington. I want to know who that man was I saw lying dead in the wood."

"He stopped, and I realized with a shock that Spencer's story had done absolutely nothing to solve Wickley's mystery. I had counted confidently on its cracking the nut, but, instead, it simply presented me with the same mystery over again.

"You never discovered who it was?"

"He shook his head. "Never to this day. I can only tell you that nobody is known to have been murdered, or even missing, in Devonset at that time. But I'm afraid that won't help you very much."

"Tell me what you did, and what your wife did, immediately afterwards."

"I fumed going back for three or four days. My nerves were utterly rattled. When I got home, my wife had left, cleared right out, and we

"She got in a funk afterwards, when her temper cooled, and tried to unsay it, and back out."

Wickleys are a very good old Devonset family, and if family pride would keep people straight, well, it ought to have kept him. He didn't show that feature, either, to begin with, but you'll see in a minute the sort of too-good-for-the-damned-stockbroker gentleman he was. My place was about twice the size of his, I may add, and he was deuced glad to have as many days' shooting with me as he could get. Some precious rotten days he gave me in exchange; but, of course, shooting with a two-penny half-penny squire was always an honor!

of her! She was an uncommonly beautiful girl. She was on the stage at one time, I may say, and might have gone very far on her looks alone, but I married her and took her away from it. She was a lady by birth, but she hadn't a penny, and it was a love marriage pure and simple—love marriage on my part, at least, for I don't believe she ever really loved me. We had no children, either, and that was a fatal mistake."

"He paused and stared moodily at my fire. I was much more in sympathy with Mr. Spencer now.

"Well, to get over an unpleasant business as quickly as possible, we began to drift apart pretty fast. I still loved her to distraction—in a way; but we both had tempers, and she led me the devil of a dance, and it was cat and dog half the time. When I bought this place Devonset she kicked at living there permanently—too slow for her. She'd stay for some months, and we'd have house parties and so on, and then back to town again. And then all of a sudden she quite changed round. Perfectly agreeable to living all the year in the country she became now, so we gave up our flat in town and settled in Devonset, even though it meant her being quite a good bit by herself, for I generally had to spend a part of my week in town for business reasons.

"Then, like a thunderclap, came the suspicion that there was something behind this change of tune. One needn't go into all the details, but several little things made me morally certain that Elsie was being unfaithful to me. We were having worse rows than usual at that time, and in one shindy I charged her with it. In order to hit me back hard, she actually admitted it!"

"In order to hit you hard?" I interrupted. "Are you sure she meant it?"

"Perfectly, because she got in a funk afterwards, when her temper cooled, and tried to unsay it, and back out. Besides, the little things on which I had based my suspicions had convinced me already. And now I had her word for it!"

"Spencer was quite carried away by his own story by this time, and I could judge exactly the kind of dangerous, revengeful man he was.

"The only question was, who was the man? And there couldn't be any question about that, either. Wickley was the only possibility!"

"Ah!" I exclaimed, and he looked at me sharply. "Go on," I said. "I begin to see the position now."

ever saw any of them. Besides, I had grown more and more convinced that Wickley had something shady in the background! I knew him now to be a blackguard!"

"Knew?" I repeated. "But had you any proof?"

"When there are no possible alternatives, that's proof enough! Besides, I soon got proof of his character. I made inquiries about him, set an agency on to his track, and I discovered—he paused and hesitated for an instant. "Well, I need only say that he would never have been received in any decent society if people knew what I found out. It had happened abroad—he had done it!"

Again he broke off, and the scowl lifted a little from his face. "But the man had suffered for his sins, and it had really nothing to do with my story, except that it gave me a hold over him. I was mad with anger, and I determined to use it."

"Had nothing else passed between you?" I ventured to ask, for I remembered Wickley's version, and I suspected Spencer was skipping a bit.

"Oh, well," he admitted, "I may as well allow that I had shown him pretty plainly that I didn't want to have anything more to do with him. We had one open row, and that was when he showed me what a damned high-and-mighty aristocratic snob he was. 'Gentlemen aren't grown in two days out of dirty stockbroking mushrooms!' Those were his actual words!"

"I must confess that I had scarcely given Mr. Wickley credit for such powers of invective, and I realized now to what a pitch of fury the two of them had roused one another.

"As I was saying," he went on, "I was quite beside myself with rage by this time, and I did a damned silly thing. I wrote to him, threatening to show him up if he didn't clear out of the place; I even went to the length of telling him he must sell his property. That was simply to crush his pride, of course."

"You called it 'silly,'" I said. "That seems hardly the adjective."

"Wait a bit, and you'll see why," said he. "I must tell you first that I was trying hard to catch my wife all this time. Having to go up to town two or three days a week, and leave her to play the devil with that fellow, nearly drove me mad. On the other hand, it gave me a chance of catching her napping. One of my servants was watching her for me, but I think Elsie must have suspected him."

"Him?" I said. "Do you mean your butler?"

"It was my chauffeur, as a matter of fact; a smart young fellow. He came to me one day and told me he suspected what was up, and offered to watch her. I paid him well for it, but though he said Wickley was often hanging round my place he never found anything definite against my wife. I tried my own hand at it, too, by coming back from town when she didn't expect me, but they were cunning as Satan. I never caught them."

"But, to come to the climax of the affair, I

The Weekly Health Talk

By DR. G. A. JORDAN,
Assistant City Health Commissioner of St. Louis.

THE establishment of clinics for the administration of diphtheria serum at a number of police stations will do much to relieve the danger of spreading the disease. Thirty deaths have been caused by diphtheria out of 676 cases developed from Nov. 1 to Nov. 29. Serum is administered at the Health Department office and at the police station clinics by physicians. Dr. Martin C. Woodruff, chief diagnostician of the department, has said that the people should take advantage of the opportunity to be immunized, as the diphtheria death rate is entirely too high.

It is not enough, however, that we should be inoculated with the antitoxin, we must take up the question of prevention as individuals. The co-operation of every citizen is of untold value to the Health Department in every contagion.

It must be understood, first, that no case of diphtheria ever originates in any other way than by an exposure to the organism of the disease, either by contact with an afflicted person or by exposure to some article contaminated with the infection. Exposure to a person is by far the most frequent cause. When the disease is recognized and placed in the care of a physician naturally the patient is isolated at once.

It is the person who has the infection which is not recognized who is the greatest menace. Such a person goes about unhindered, spreading the disease to all who are susceptible. He may recover without the disease having been discovered. A malignant case is rarely dangerous to others because it is recognized. The average citizen and many physicians, however, seem unable to appreciate the importance of carefully scrutinizing the apparently mild throat and nose infections.

We do not want to be understood to mean that every cold or sore throat be placed under suspicion of diphtheria, but a person who has a very severe sore throat, especially if it is accompanied by an elevation of temperature, is wise to consider whether the infection may not be something more serious. Consult a physician, and a swab from the throat with an examination of the culture will greatly aid in arriving at a safe conclusion.

Children are especially dangerous as carriers of the disease. School physicians frequently find positive diagnosis of diphtheria, and send the child home. The mother then may call in a private physician, who says, after a superficial examination, that it is not a case of diphtheria. The parent becomes honest in the opinion that the child is not a menace to others, and refuses or neglects to take proper precautions in seeing that the child does not imperil others.

Too early termination of recognized cases is another danger. No case should be dismissed when the patient appears cured unless two cultures have been negative, on successive days.

Not even a 60-horsepower car can drag a man to church on Sunday morning, if a little one-arm-power golf ball is tantalizing him to take the broad and wicked path to the golf links.

Ah, me! If a man would only cling to his wife as faithfully and devotedly as he clings to the same old pipe, year after year—but come to think of it, the pipe never accuses him of "neglecting" it, no matter how long it has to hang around unnoticed.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Rusty Makes Up His Mind.

RUSTY the Fox Squirrel had plenty of time in which to think, and he did think. There wasn't anything else to do and if there had been he couldn't have done it. He was still too much injured by the shot from that terrible gun to move about. He didn't want to move, which was a good thing. Quietness was the best thing in the world for him, as Farmer Brown's boy had said.

But Rusty could think without hurting his injured body and the did think. He thought and thought and the subject of all that thought was Farmer Brown's boy. Rusty had been terribly afraid of him and because he had been terribly afraid he had tried to bite him. Instead of thinking. It must be that there are different kinds of those two-legged giants. I—It's sorry I tried to bite this one. I won't again. I don't believe he means me any harm. I'm sure he doesn't.

Having made up his mind to this Rusty felt better. One always feels better when no longer distrustful of another. So the next time Farmer Brown's boy put his hand in to take him out and care for his wounds Rusty didn't try to bite. He didn't even kick. Farmer Brown's boy noticed it right away and grinned. That grin made all the freckles on his face run together like one big freckle. He pulled off his glove and with bare fingers, very gently rubbed the top of Rusty's head. Somehow at the touch of those bare fingers on his head all doubt left Rusty. That was a friendly touch. There could be no mistake about that. The friendliness he run together all through him. There was nothing to fear from one with a touch like that. There couldn't be. Rusty rubbed his nose against that hand and again Farmer Brown's boy grinned. He understood that just as Rusty understood that gentle touch on his head.

"I see you have made up your mind that I will do you no harm and that we are going to be friends," said Farmer Brown's boy, as he put Rusty back in his soft bed in the cage.

"That is good. Now you'll get along faster. It won't be long before you are as smart as ever."

Farmer Brown's boy was right. Having made up his mind that there was nothing to fear Rusty began to get better fast. In a day or so he was able to crawl out of his bed and examine his cage. He was still pretty lame and very sore, but his appetite had returned, and he enjoyed his food. Farmer Brown's boy came to see him many times a day and he never failed to bring some good things to eat. There were goodies such as Rusty never had tasted before and he began to look eagerly for the coming of Farmer Brown's boy and hurried over to the door of his cage whenever he heard the steps of Farmer Brown's boy approaching. He would take the food from the latter's fingers and it never once entered his head to bite those fingers.

MORE TRUTH THAN POETRY

By James J. Montague.

THE MORAL INSULT.

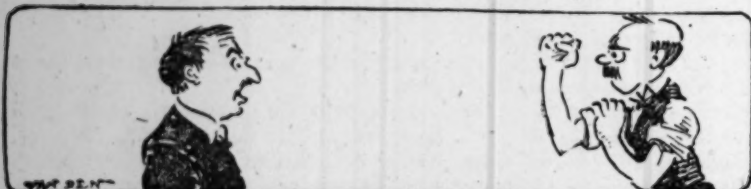

The American Cuisine—it is something frivolous.—Blasco Ibañez.

What, knock our good old Yankee chow—
A man brought up on hot tamales, Which all right-minded men allow
Are merely culinary follies?
Run down our lard; deprecate our pie—
A stolid foreigner whose soul is Impossible to satisfy Except with chile and frijoles!

Why even folks from gay Parée,
Who journey through our mighty nation, Declare our pork and beans to be
Our rock and refuge and foundation.
They like our sausage and our wheats,
In fact, they rarely dine without 'em,
And they declare our Yankee cats
Have nothing frivolous about 'em.

We would not mind had Blasco said,
The while he made our buckwheats vanish,
That of the menus he was fed
Not all were just exactly Spanish.
We might have let the bird get by
If ham and cabbage he had tasted,
Or even listed rhubarb pie
As quite the worst he ever tasted.

But when this Blasco gent referred
In sneering accents to our diet,
In "frivolous" he used the word
Which rouses us to rage and riot.
We'll grin when foreigners declare
Our men are bores, our girls ill looking,
But there's one thing we will not bear,
And that's to have 'em knock our cooking!

TRYING HIM OUT.

he will be given a chance to boss
the League of Nations.

Question of Direction.

Arithmetic, according to the average small boy, was simply invented in order to give teachers a good excuse for punishing their unhappy pupils.
And, certainly, little Tommy Smith found it the unpleasant feature of his young life.

"Now, Tommy Smith," said the school teacher one morning, during the usual hours of torture, "what is the half of eight?"

"Which way, teacher?" asked the youngster, cautiously.

"Which way?" replied the astonished lady. "What do you mean?"

"Well, on top or sideways, teacher?" said Tommy.

"What difference does that make?"

"Why," Tommy explained, with a pitying air, "half off the top of eight is nought, but half of it sideways is three."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

It Filled the Lobby.

The Parrot and the Bear.

Through the long summer hours she had done her best to let him see she liked him. But he wrapped himself in a cloak of cynicism, and made no move. "Marriage!" he spoke bitterly. "Marriage is a mistake! Why should a man saddle himself with a wife for life, when he can buy a parrot for $5?"

She hid her anger behind a charming smile. "Yes," she retorted.
"There again you men certainly have the advantage. We poor women can't buy a bear of any kind under $200."—Japan Advertiser.

Question Unanswered.

"Mamma, when the fire goes out where does it go?"

"My dear boy, I don't know. You might just as well ask me where your father goes when he goes out."— Houston Post.

Not a Hoot.

"No, Your Honor, he didn't give a hoot whether I saw him coming or not."

"How do you know he didn't give a hoot?"

"Well, he didn't blow his horn."—
